

With Success, Young Pa. Simmental Breeders Go National

AMITY (Washington Co.) and MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — During the last several years, the Simmental breed in this country has undergone significant changes, largely through intensive breeding practices conducted on a national scale.

Two young men from Pennsylvania who have positioned themselves on the front edge of those developments are Justin Mankey of Washington County and Tim Schaeffer of Lebanon County.

Mankey, 20, a student at Washington and Jefferson College, and Schaeffer, a senior at Eastern Lebanon County High School, both exhibited grand champion Simmental cattle at the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition (KILE) in Harrisburg this October. They also shared credit for the grand champion female in the junior show recently at the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) in Louisville, Ky.

S&S Sahara, a heifer bred by Schaeffer and owned by Mankey, took championship honors at both shows. Schaeffer, who bought his first Simmental cows in 1995, said the breed produces a “more complete” beef animal.

“They might not be the prettiest things in the world,” he said. “But when they mature into cows, they are so functional.”

Schaeffer said that in recent years, the Simmental has been bred for increased weight gains over shorter periods of time, as well as for smaller frame sizes and solid color — usually black — for better commercial and show appeal.

Historically red and white, Simmental crossbreeding with Black Angus caused the shift to more solid black cattle. Downsizing the large Simmental frame was also necessary to make the breed more viable in the beef industry. Previously, the animals “were too big for commercial producers,” according to Schaeffer.

Meanwhile, the cows have maintained an impressive level of high milk production inherited from full-blooded Simmentals, he said.

Both Schaeffer and Mankey use embryo transfer (ET) tech-

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — USDA policymakers continue to develop a “meaningful standard” for organic agriculture across the country.

That was the message delivered by Mark Keating of the National Organic Program (NOP) to a group of farmers, processors, and certifying personnel gathered at the annual Pennsylvania Certified Organic (PCO) meeting here Wednesday.

More than 100 people attended the daylong seminar.

While the control of specific materials used in growing and processing organic food will remain an important part of the certification process, Keating said it is crucial that the final organic rule does not create “an unbearable compliance system,” he said, but rather emphasize the whole process of organic agriculture.

“It’s important that we maintain focus on practice standards,” he said. “It has to be about the big picture. We can

WESTMINSTER, Md. — “Thriving in 2002 and Beyond” was the theme of the annual meeting of the Maryland

Dairy Industry Association (MDIA) conducted here Thursday.

Addressing top challenges facing dairy producers, professionals from the region spoke to the group on topics such as practicing biosecurity measures, maximizing economic returns, improving reproductive success, and managing labor resources.

Richard Stup of Penn State spoke to the need for good workforce management on growing dairy operations, telling the group that none of the other aspects of herd management can succeed unless the people doing the work are well-managed.

“If you want to manage a dairy in the 21st century, you need to manage people,” he said. “You’ve got to enjoy people as much as you enjoy cows.”

Stup stressed the need for managers to create job descriptions for employees and standard operating procedures for daily jobs such as milking, heat detection, and feeding.

Workers need planned training sessions for each task, need to see the results of what they PHILADELPHIA — “Spreading the Bounty and Safeguarding the Future” was the theme of the third annual Future of our Food and Farms Summit, conducted Thursday and Friday at Philadelphia Airport’s Renaissance Hotel.

The theme highlighted the summit’s focus of increasing good nutrition, reducing hunger, and supporting farming in the Mid-Atlantic region.

The Farmers’ Market Trust and RISA (Regional Infrastructure for Sustaining Agriculture) hosted the event, which drew 180 food distributors, health officials, nutritionists, extension agents, government officials, and educators.

SMALL PACKAGES

Take a hint from St. Nicholas while holiday shopping this year. Think small but sweet. This patron saint of children, who celebrates his feast day on December 6, left candies and trinkets in children's shoes. In the Middle Ages, the author Thomas Naogeorgus (1511-1563) described these "Children's Day" offerings this way: "Both apples, nuts, and prayers they bring, and other things besides. / As caps, and shoes, and petticoats, with kirtles they hide." What if your gifts had to fit in the space of a child's clog? Good things can come in small packages, if you're clever. The simple gift of your presence, your time and laughter, and your listening ear are just a few possible presents that could be pledged in a shoe. The clues for a scavenger hunt might show the path to items that won't fit into a child's shoe.

Little sticks kindle the fire; great ones put it out.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Nov 23. Receipts: this week 48,100; last week 176,300; year ago 65,700. Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers sold 2.00-5.00 higher on this Thanksgiving holiday shortened week. Some early-week auctions were quoted as much as 10.00 higher by the USDA's Livestock and Grain Market News Service, after five straight weeks of lower prices. This market can make a cattleman feel like he's on a runaway rollercoaster, hanging on for dear life and his hat just flew off.

It's unclear which factor is responsible for this sudden turnaround. Limited holiday receipts may have helped, but that is no reason to pay sharply higher prices. Recent rains across the winter wheat regions boosted calf demand. However, colder weather will soon put wheat into a dormant stage and conditions are presently so wet that cattle are sure to tromp-out what little grazing there is.

Last week's cattle-on-feed report showed light numbers of cattle weighing over 700 lbs placed on feed in October, which supported the yearling market and the spring outlook for fats. Also, cattle futures made significant advances and dressed beef prices turned sharply higher as buying increased for expected post turkey sandwich demand. Whatever the reason, this ride is headed back up after a dip that left most people's stomachs behind. Packers paid a full 5.00 more for slaughter steers and heifers this week at 65.00, and dressed sales were 4.00-5.00 higher at 105.00. Dispersal was good with the five major trading areas turning-in 199,400 head of negotiated sales to the USDA's Mandatory Price Reporting System through Friday afternoon. Cattle sellers were able to hold down their Thanksgiving dinner, but next week could be several dollars in either direction if this volatile trend continues. This week's reported volume included 37 percent over 600 lbs, but keep in mind that many Southeastern calf auctions were closed.

OPINION

Industry Groups To Develop Dairy Future

Several industry segments are becoming involved in dairy development in the Northeast. The Dairy Stakeholders organization is bringing those segments together in an industrywide effort to grow the Northeast dairy industry.

Production trends and industry demo graphics have made it clear that the local dairy industry must grow to ensure our future as a major dairy production region.

Simply stated, if Pennsylvania and the Northeast do not become more aggressive in ensuring a constant and growing milk supply, then processors and marketers will make investments and future commitments in other parts of the country that can supply their need.

"We've already seen dairies and processing plants leaving other parts of the country that do not have a strong dairy infrastructure," said Alan Bair, Dairy Stakeholders facilitator. "We want to make sure that doesn't happen here."

Pennsylvania produces about 11 billion pounds of milk annually. With the existing processing and marketing infrastructure in the Northeast, we could use an additional two billion pounds of milk to satisfy the growing market.

"The market opportunity is here now," Bair said. "But the question is, where will the milk be produced?"

Both the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders' mission and vision statement reflect viability and expansion of the dairy industry as the cornerstones of the organization. So what better organization to bring "Pennsylvania Dairy Development" from discussion to action?

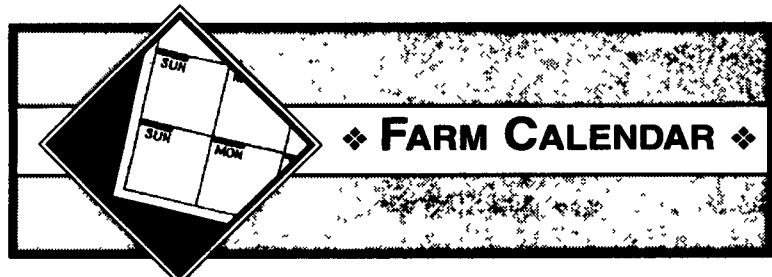

Organizations such as Dairyalea, Dairy Farmers of America, Land O'Lakes, Dairy Alliance, Pennsylvania Department of Ag, and cooperative extension have programs in place that support production growth. An economic development group in Blair County has also started its own local activity. There is also interest in the northwest area of Pennsylvania.

To create an industrywide effort, the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders and the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania are working with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Department of Community and Economic Development to explore potential resources to help agriculture. All of the organizations named above are willing to work individually and in support of our industry. It will take both to be effective in creating ongoing dairy economic development efforts.

If you or a company you represent wants to become more involved or is involved in some aspect of dairy development but not mentioned above, contact Alan Bair to make your interests known at (717) 948-6328.

Every one of us — from current and potential producers to companies and individuals who depend on milk production to educators and public officials and finally to consumers — have a huge stake in the dairy industry. The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders invites you to make a commitment to yourself and to the industry by becoming actively involved in developing the Pennsylvania dairy industry.

Editor:

I just wanted to say I agree with the woman who said she believed the Dairy Council was wasting dairymen's money with the type of advertising they are doing. Frankly, seeing some celebrity with a milk mustache does not entice me to drink milk. While the whole "Milk Mustache" ad campaign is putting a lot of money in celebrities' pockets, I wonder if anyone has ever been induced to drink milk from these ads!

I hope she "sharpens some pencils" for the milk producers' dollars.

To Prepare Your Strawberry Crop For Winter

As we head into winter, there are a few things that should be taken care of in your strawberry fields.

First you need to clean up any winter annual weeds that have germinated this fall and will make major trouble in the spring. This can be done by applying nonselective herbicides with directed spray equipment. The herbicides that can be used include Gramoxone Extra or Scythe. These products will burn the foliage but are not translocated. Make sure the spray does not contact the strawberry plants.

The next step in weed control is to apply Sinbar before the ground freezes for preemergent control of weeds in the spring. The label no longer allows for early spring application so this must be applied now. Dacthal or Devrinol can be applied in early spring to give you additional herbicide protection.

After your herbicide application is complete, the next step is to apply mulch to protect the crowns from temperature fluctuations and winter winds. It is important to protect the crowns since next spring's flower buds have already been formed. Winter damage to the crowns will mean lower yields. Apply only very clean wheat, barley, oat, or rye straw. Using only clean straw is critical since achieving good weed control in strawberries is a difficult challenge even without seeding new weeds by applying weed-infested straw. A four-inch mulch will require 2 to 3 tons of straw per acre. Apply the straw uniformly and avoid clumps that can smother plants.

If you are growing strawberries using the plasticulture system, your winter preparations are similar to those for a conventionally grown crop. Clean up any winter annuals growing between the rows of plastic with contact herbicides as listed above. A backpack sprayer calibrated to your walking speed works well for herbicide applications between the rows. Apply Sinbar between the rows for residual preemergent control of summer annual weeds that will germinate in the spring. As with a conventional crop, Dacthal or Devrinol can be applied in early spring to give you additional herbicide protection.

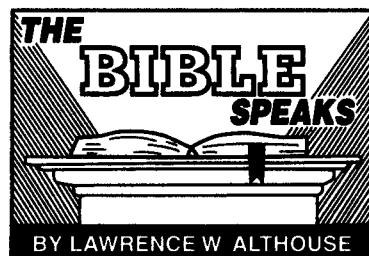

In most situations, straw mulch will not be applied in a plasticulture system. Floating row covers weighing 1-1.4 ounce per yard have been effective for winter protection. In the colder areas, one can apply straw for extra protection. The straw layer can be applied over the row covers and removed in early spring by pulling back the row covers. Another option would be to directly apply the straw on the rows. However, this will need to be manually removed in the spring and can be time-consuming.

To Do Your

Year-End Tax Planning

With one month remaining in the calendar year, you should have a pretty good idea what kind of year you will have financially. It is important to discuss this with your accountant now so you can make your year-end plans.

If you are expecting to have a high tax liability, a number of steps can be taken to reduce this liability.

TIME TO QUIT?

Background Scripture:

Isaiah 49:1-7.

Devotional Reading:

Isaiah 49:8-13.

The crisis which faces us and of which we have become painfully aware since September 11, 2001, has forced many Christians to realize that the religious statistics are not very comforting.

Islam is growing by leaps and bounds at a time when Christianity is struggling for its life in America and Europe. It would seem that both our democracy and our faith are under attack.

The 20th century began with many Christians taking up the call to "win the whole world for Christ." The 20th century was to become the Christian Century and a prominent interdenominational magazine took that as its name.

But as the century came to a close, Christianity seemed to be losing ground. Practically every religious denomination in the U.S. has experienced steady declines in membership for the last four or five decades. In England and Europe the great cathedrals are virtually empty and fewer and fewer people identify themselves as disciples of Jesus Christ.

So, perhaps we can truly appreciate the lament of the prophet Isaiah when he proclaims to the peoples of the world that, despite the fact that God had called and equipped Israel to be the servant through whom God would be glorified among the nations, still "I have labored in vain, I have spent my strength for nothing and vanity..."

Faith, Not Success

Are there not many among us today who feel pretty much the same way? Even if we didn't succeed in taking Christ to all the nations, couldn't we at least be gaining instead of losing?

Israel is honest to admit its frustration. Take a look at the statistics. Lord, things are not going well with this mission. You called us, yes, but nothing is going the way it should.

Notice the dialogue here. God says, "You are my servant..." and Israel replies, "But... I have labored in vain..." Then, instead of replying to Israel's complaint, God calls his servant to an even greater mission: "... is it too light a thing that you should be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved of Israel; I will give you as a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach the ends of the earth" (49:5,6).

Forget the statistics. This is not about whether you are winning or losing, but whether you are doing what I have called you to do and be. Leave the winning or losing to me. You are called not to be suc-

If you are using a cash accounting system, early purchase of next year's supplies would be a good decision. Purchase of needed equipment before the end of the year can provide a tax deduction as well.

The important word in the previous sentence is "needed." Buying equipment that only marginally contributes to the productivity of the operation simply to reduce tax payments is a bad idea. In that case you would be better off simply paying the taxes and keeping the balance of the money that would have been spent on equipment.

To Comment On EPA's CAFO Rules

The US Environmental Protection Agency received public comment on proposed Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs) regulations in July.

Based on comments received, the agency has released a "Notice of Data Availability." This notice summarizes the comments received and how the EPA may use this data in developing its final CAFO rules.

The agency is seeking comments to improve its final rulemaking. Comments will be accepted until Jan. 15, 2002. This may be the last time the rules are changed for quite a while, so take this opportunity to have input on development of this important public policy.

Penn State has produced a fact sheet entitled "Shaping New EPA CAFO Rules: A Guide to the EPA's November 2001 Notice of Data Availability." This publication is available online at <http://agenvpolicy.aers.psu.edu/CAFO/NODA.htm>. This publication covers how to obtain a copy of the notice, key areas for comment, tips for preparing comments, and how to submit comments. If you do not have Internet access, you can request a printed copy by calling Extension Associate Alyssa Dodd at (814) 863-5884.

Quote of The Week:

"Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that."

A Light To The Nations

Christians today are not called to compete with or to be successful over Moslems, Hindus, Confucians, or Jews. God has called us instead to be "a light to the nations." If we concentrate on that mission, we can leave to God the end result: "... that my salvation may reach to the end of the earth."

Bigger churches, more members, more prosperous denominations, larger head counts — none of these are important unless they make brighter our "light to the nations."

So the big questions today are not, Why is Islam growing so strong? Why are church rolls growing smaller? Why does it seem that we "have labored in vain" and spent our strength "for nothing and vanity?" No, the question is, Are we faithful to the mission God has given us? Are we living as God's servants and is our witness to the world God's "light to the nations?"

The late Henry Sloane Coffin has written: "God is self-sufficient, but he must have a people through whom his glory can burst upon the sight of men. Israel's message and life, conspicuously her sufferings, are the mediums through which God has revealed himself."

God needs us not for our success, but for our servanthood through which he works the success of his will and purpose in the world.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean trade did another about face and bids turned lower, Midweek. Export sales continued slow, despite fair wheat orders and a good corn order overnight to Egypt. Wheat steady to 5 cents lower. Corn 3 to 6 cents lower. Sorghum steady to 2 cents lower.

Soybeans 1 to 8 cents lower.

Wheat bids were slightly lower influenced by slow export interest. A small order was announced today from South Korea but tonnage so far is slim. Winter wheat crops are looking good and favorable growing weather has been adding pressure. Corn and soybean bids were sharply lower again, pressured by continued slow foreign business. Farmers continue to hold on to their crops while prices remain so low.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.

Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.7235-1.8752. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.7097-1.8890 mostly 1.7649-1.8200.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: 1.0000-1.0800; Class III - spot prices - .9800-1.0600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 52; last week - In 4, Out 0; last year - In 5, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 14, Out 0; last week In 14, Out 0; last year In 21, Out 0.

The base price for Class I milk for December 2001 is $11.98 per cwt., down $3.78 from November. Class I differentials specific to each order are added to the base price to determine the Class I price. The Class II skim milk price for December is $7.85, down nine cents from November.

Milk production in the East is generally steady in the more northern areas, increasing in the Southeast. Fluid milk supplies are heavier in Florida and this week handlers had to ship loads out of state for processing. This is the first significant number of loads shipped out of state since July. A combination of a heavy "carry over," slower than expected demand, and increased milk production in the state all led to the cancellation of incoming loads and need to clear more than fifty loads of milk this week. All across the region, contacts are stating that bottled milk demand is lackluster and that bottlers are maneuvering to take advantage of the large drop ($3.78 per cwt) in December's Class I milk price. Bottlers are slowing operations to the degree that they can on Thursday and Friday of this week and will "really hit it hard" on Saturday and Sunday when the new, lower Class I prices are in effect. Surplus milk volumes are heavier and particularly noticeable in the Southeast where some balancing plants are full. However, the region's processing capacity was far from being tested. In the Northeast, manufacturing plants were more active during the holiday period, but things are getting back to pre-Thanksgiving levels.

The condensed skim market is little changed and prices are steady to lower within the ranges. Class II condensed skim is generally moving in the lower half of the range, but a few prices at the upper end of the range continue to be reported. Demand is fair to occasionally improved, but drying did increase during the holiday weekend.

The fluid cream market is slightly improved, but supplies are still more than ample for current Class II needs. Spot prices are slightly higher due more to the change in the CME butter price than a change in multiple. Some local plants are back on line after an extended downtime last week. Other operations continue to operate as they have been. Cream cheese output is holding about steady. Egg nog production is limited and, if historical patterns are to be followed, should pick up during the second week of December to fill Christmas and New Year's needs. Churning activity is

Passing On The Farm Workshops Dec. 10, 12

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.)
— Transferring a family farm to the next generation seems as natural as the change in seasons. But tax traps, family squabbles, and lack of financing or business planning challenge many families attempting a transition — and outright threaten the continuation of some farms.

To help Pennsylvania farm families navigate these challenges, the Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Cooperative Extension program will host two "Passing on the Farm" workshops in December:

- Monday, Dec. 10, at the Reliance Hose Company, 240 E. Main Street, Middleburg. Lunch reservations of $5.50 per person and payment are required by Dec. 3.

- Wednesday, Dec. 12, at the Wayne County Visitors Center, 303 Commercial Street, Honesdale. Registration deadline is Dec. 9.

Both workshops run from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Speakers will address bringing the next generation into the farm business, farm viability, farmland preservation programs, estate planning, legal aspects of transfers, retirement planning, financing for new farmers and crop insurance. In addition, farmers from the region will discuss their families' efforts to transfer their businesses to the next generation.

According to the 1997 Census, three times as many farm operators are over age 65 as under 35.

Just from the perspective of retirement age, one-third to one-half of farmers will retire in the next decade. How we address this problem will affect agriculture in Pennsylvania for generations to come.

"At no other point in the history of U.S. agriculture have we faced such a wide generation gap in farm participants," said the National Commission on Small Farms report, "A Time to Act," released in 1998.

Marion Bowlan, executive director of Pennsylvania Farm Link, said, "In addition to providing for our food and fiber needs, farm families provide economic stability to our rural area, protect its prime farmland and steward the land for generations to come. If we want to retain family farmers as part of our rural heritage we must do more to encourage new farm entry."

"How a farmer plans for his or her successor is one of the most important lifetime decisions that farmers will make.

Because it requires frank and open discussions about retirement and death, many families either delay or avoid the planning process," she said. "This strategy only narrows the choices and options available to both the retiring farmer and the beginning farmer and may result in unwanted tax consequences. Perhaps the most difficult decision to make is the decision to 'just do it.' Once you have made that decision there are many individuals and organizations such as Pennsylvania Farm Link that can help you in the planning process."

The Passing on the Farm workshops are provided at no charge to farmers; lunch is on your own at the Wayne County workshop and at a cost of $5.50 per person at the Snyder County Workshop. Call Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 to make reservations. For more information on the program or directions, phone the Farm Link office or e-mail pafarmlink@redrose.net.

The evening program will include speaker, Don Schriver, senior vice president, Dairy Farmers of America. His presentation is titled, "A Unified Industry Can Progress."

Four New Members Elected To Somerset Cooperative Extension

SANDRA LEPLEY

Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Four new members have been recently elected to serve on the Somerset County Cooperative Extension Board after results were tallied from the annual membership meeting at the Somerset Masonic Temple Nov. 8.

New members are Bill Blough, Greg Croner, Verdean Keyser, and Marvin Thomas.

Bill Blough is a former dairy farmer who resides in Jenner Township. He is an active 4-H leader with the Jenner Township 4-H Club. He also serves as chairman of the Farm Safety Coalition.

Greg Croner lives in Brothersvalley Township and is a beef producer. He is active in the local volunteer firemen's association and Lions Club. He has a degree in business administration from Geneva College.

Verdean Keyser represents the agriculture program in the Jennerstown area.

She is director of Skyview Lab and serves as industry representative on the Forage and Grassland Council with Penn State University.

Marvin Thomas resides in Conemaugh Township. The former dairy producer has interests in agronomy, crop production and farm safety. He is active with the Jerome Volunteer Fire Company.

Dr. Jack Watson, assistant director for Penn State Cooperative Extension, served as the guest speaker for the banquet. Michael Carr, president of the board, introduced Watson and welcomed about 150 people in attendance.

"You (as farmers) have the opportunity to impact lives in a very powerful and meaningful way," said Watson. "You must ask yourself 'how do I decide today how my business will be profitable tomorrow?' Farmers today are struggling with globalization and how the changes in the market affect them. The rules have changed. What we knew once before might not apply today. Farmers today are being challenged constantly to think outside the box, facing challenges and taking on new methods."

Watson related that two percent of the people in the U.S. today live on a farm and that small percentage meet the country's need on a daily basis. He says he feels honored to have his job because he is involved with the people who feed the thousands.

Other guests included Harold Shaulis, Farm Bureau president; Spencer Williams, Farm Service Agency; and Jim Bochy and Tom Calvert, former extension agents.

Dottie Bromley, county extension director, introduced the extension staff and reported that the staff has grown in the past year. Staff members include Miguel Savioff, agriculture agent; Joanne Stoltzfus, 4-H and youth development; Melanie Barkley, Thomas Ford, Michael Harteis, Sharon McDonald, John Tyson, all extension agents; Linda Johnson, administrative assistant; Kathy Dwyer, secretary; Karen Elchin, Better Kid Care satellite facilitator; Lori Engleka, Better Kid Care coordinator; Amanda Darr, summer assistant; and Sara Lowery, Green Thumb.

Local residents gave "Comments from the Community" as they shared how cooperative extension touched their lives through programs in agriculture, family living, 4-H and youth.

Vince Barbera, a former 4-H'er and Somerset attorney, also related his youthful experiences in 4-H as a community member. He told the audience that other than his family, 4-H had the greatest impact on his young adult life.

"From taking a project and seeing it through to fruition to getting up in front of people and making a speech like this one to the demonstration process, which is a lifelong skill, 4-H all makes a difference," said Barbera.

"The sky is the limit in 4-H. It's a great opportunity for youth to participate and it is an organization that draws families and communities together."

Also speaking during the banquet was Jimmy Marker, Somerset County commissioner, who thanked the cooperative extension office and noted how 4-H makes a difference in Somerset County.

"4-H not only makes a difference for our youth in our county but for our country," said Marker. "In this county we are proud of 4-H. Here, agriculture is one of our biggest industries. We are the breadbasket of America. Farmers need to be commended for what they do."

Marker also advised that the cooperative extension office will be moving to the Union Street Office Building once renovations are completed.

This will be the second move for the office since last year, when the house where the extension office was located had been sold by the county. The office moved at that time to its current location on West Union Street at the magistrate office by the jail beside the courthouse.

Jessica Darr, Somerset County Lamb and Wool Queen, and Deidra Smith, Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen, spoke about their experiences in 4-H. Darr and Smith are from Somerset County.

Youth And Adults Asked To Participate In National 4-H Youth Development

SPRINGFIELD (Delaware Co.) — Youth and adults who want to contribute to an effort to collect the nation's best ideas in youth development can join the Delaware County Conversation on Youth Development in the 21st Century on Thurs., Dec. 6, from 6-9 p.m. at Furness Free Library in Wallingford convened by 4-H.

As part of the centennial of the national 4-H youth development movement, 4-H is leading conversations in all 3,067 counties of our nation. In the Local Conversations, youth and adults are being asked to describe what youth need to achieve success in their lives. Those who want to participate should contact Joyce Morrison at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office at (610) 690-2655. A light dinner of pizza will be served, so registration is required.

The Local Conversation will lead to a State Conversation in each of 50 states, District of Columbia, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and five territories. Marking the 4-H centennial year in 2002, in February 2,000 youth and adults will meet in Washington, D.C. for the National Conversation on Youth Development in the 21st century.

"This may be the largest single undertaking in the first 100 years of 4-H," says Marilyn Corbin, State Leader for Children, Youth and Families at Penn State. "We're creating a blueprint for youth programs in every community in America. It's personally exciting to be involved in something that will have a dramatic impact on the young people of this community, state, and nation."

Patterned after successful national conferences on small business and aging, the National Conversation will capture the best ideas and programs for youth development in the 21st century and present them in a report to the President of the United States, his cabinet, and Congress.

Moving ahead, 4-H intends to engage the nation in positive youth development programs, addressing youth problems, building youth skills, generating civic involvement, and creating better communities.

"All of us have a stake in how youth develop in the future," says Donald T. Floyd Jr., president and CEO of National 4-H Council. "We're looking for involvement by youth, parents, and professionals from all sectors of the community."

The conversations will use discussion guides developed by a design team of youth and adults representing the Cooperative Extension System, 4-H, other youth development organizations, academia, and National 4-H Council.

"We want the nation to know that we're not building a granite monument for our 4-H centennial," says Floyd. "Instead, in the tradition of 4-H, we're creating an action plan for families, youth leaders, and communities across the nation to guide us in the coming century."

The Local, State, and National Conversations on Youth Development will result in planning tools and a national curriculum reflecting the strategies that have been the most successful in helping young people succeed. In addition, young people will be making a civic commitment to be involved in their local communities through the Power of Youth Pledge Campaign.

4-H is one of the nation's most diverse organizations, and includes people from all economic, racial, social, political, and geographic categories. There are no barriers to participation. Young people are given the opportunity to engage in activities that hold their personal interest, while being guided by adult volunteers. Local 4-H agents are youth development professionals who provide direction and program leadership in each county as part of the nationwide Cooperative Extension System.

Originally focused on agricultural projects, 4-H has followed the needs and interests of young people into urban and suburban communities. Like other leading modern organizations, 4-H draws strength from its participants by sharing decision-making responsibilities at levels ranging from local clubs to national programs.

In Delaware County, 6,242 youth and 411 volunteers are involved in 4-H programs. More than 6.8 million youth are involved in 4-H programs annually. 4-H is part of the Cooperative Extension System, which conducts programs in all 3,067 counties of the U.S., District of Columbia, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and five territories. The Cooperative Extension System is a partnership between the United States Department of Agriculture, state land-grant universities, and local county governments.

Data Assistant, Spreadsheets Workshop Set

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Progressive farm operators in today's world are never looking for more work to do. Among the many important tasks they face is the time required to record, process, and interpret the data they need for management decision-making.

It takes time to record important data, enter it into a computer to be processed, graph or print this data, and then interpret the information and make decisions with it.

Handheld computing devices such as Palm Pilots can help managers remove several steps from the data management process and keep important management information at the manager's fingertips. Data can be entered into the handheld device, synchronized to the farm computer, and be summarized and used with a few less steps in the process.

Text documents, Web content, simple spreadsheet and database files all can be used on mobile devices. A workshop planned for Tuesday, Dec. 18 at the Adams County Extension Office from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. will help managers become more comfortable with handheld computing software. Instruction will be provided by Regional Dairy Program Coordinator Tim Beck, assisted by Dairy Management Agent Vinton Smith.

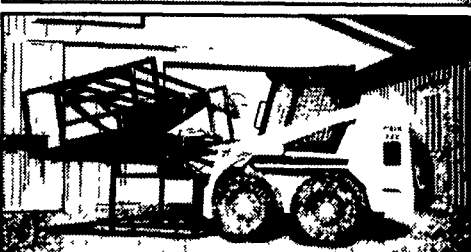

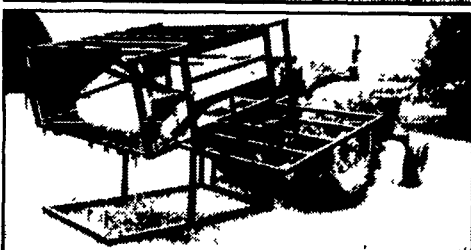

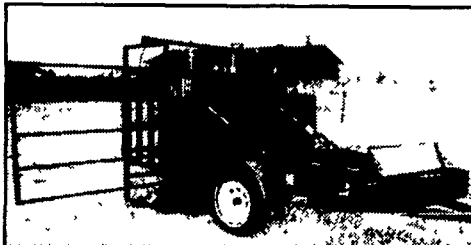

It's relatively easy to select database files, text documents, and spreadsheets that should be available for use on the handheld device and then synchronize them to the device. During the workshop, agents will demonstrate how to locate and set up Palm software, how to make files available on the handheld, and how to configure synchronization options for several spreadsheet and database programs.

Registration fee is $25 per participant for the one-day session. Lunch is not included in the registration fee. To register for the event, contact customer service at the York County Extension Office (717) 840-7408, fax (717) 755-5968, e-mail Tim Beck tbeck@psu.edu, or print out a registration form on the Web at <http://capitaldairy.cas.psu.edu>.

Simmental Breeders

nology and artificial insemination (AI) in their breeding programs.

Champion heifer Sahara was born at S&S Simmentals, the Myerstown beef operation Schaeffer helps to manage with his parents, Paul and Tracy Schaeffer.

After weaning Sahara on their farm, the Schaeffers sold her to Mankey, who led her to the championships in Harrisburg and Louisville.

Mankey said he "got seriously into Simmentals" about six years ago, after showing other beef breeds for several years.

Influenced by his parttime employer, Duane Snee of D&D Cattle Company in Washington County, 4-H'er Mankey began to focus on breeding and showing Simmentals, looking for ways to build and improve his own herd.

He has more than 20 purebred Simmentals along with "a handful of crossbreds," besides being a full-time student and continuing to work for Snee.

The Schaeffer's herd also has ties with D&D Cattle Company. In fact, Tim's first show heifer was D&D Dunk's Miss Delight, the dam of Sahara.

According to Schaeffer, the winning ways of that heifer have made her famous.

"Sahara is known all over the country now," he said.

A young bull named S&S Survivor proved another success for Schaeffer in the show ring this year, winning grand champion honors at KILE.

Born Feb. 2 this year, Survivor weighed 1,000 pounds at eight months of age and had reached 1,220 pounds by 10 months, Schaeffer said.

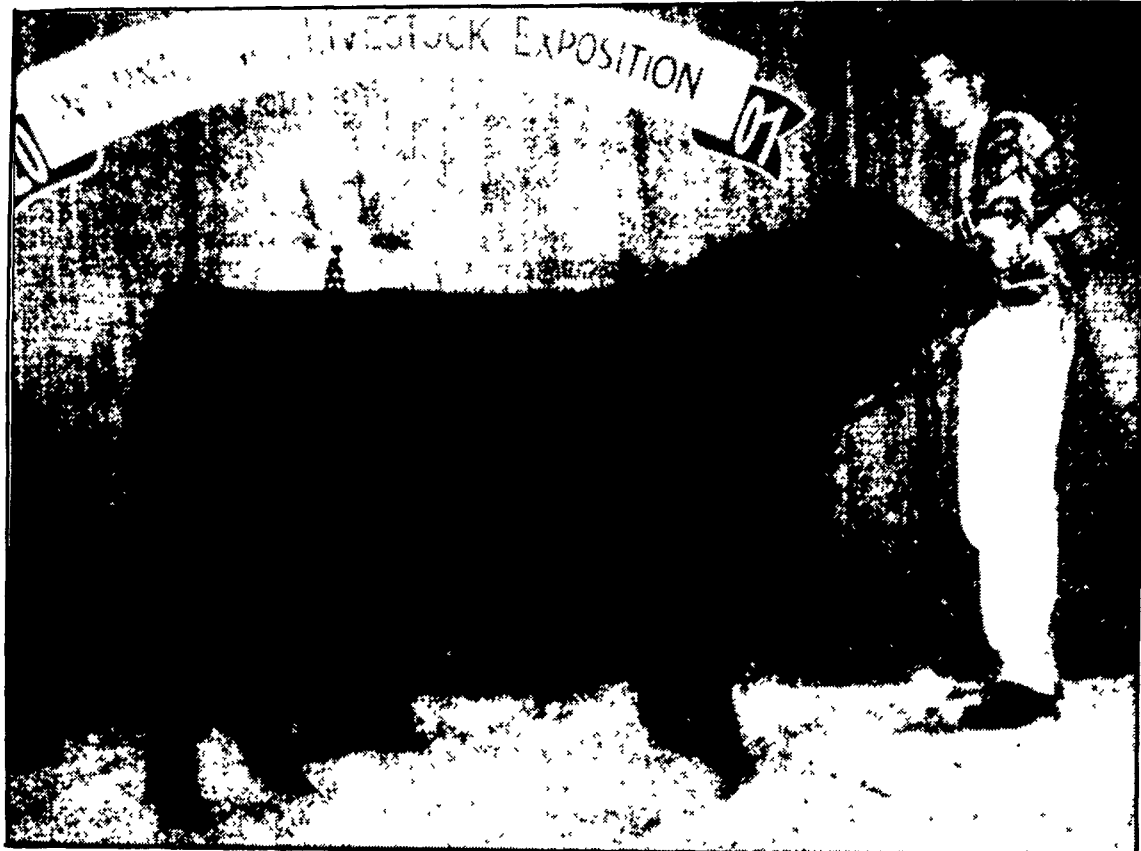

The Schaeffers do not normally keep bulls on the farm for longer than six months, but Survivor was an exceptional calf, which earned him a place on the farm and his name, which was given by Tim's mother.

"He survived the test," Schaeffer said, noting that he has already turned down several offers ranging from $7,500 to $8,000 for the young bull. He plans to collect semen from Survivor for AI purposes.

The family keeps about 30 cows on the farm, many of which are used to carry the offspring of "big name donor (ET) cows," Schaeffer said.

Queen of the Nile, renowned among Simmental breeders, was purchased last year by the Schaeffers along with two other buyer partners. Housed in Nebraska, she is flushed for embryos every 35 days with an average yield of about 20 eggs per flush.

Another donor cow, S&S Fancy Pants, is housed at the Em/Tran ET facility in Elizabethtown. One of her female offspring, S&S Smarty Pants, will be on display as 2-year-old at the

Pennsylvania Farm Show in January.

This year, the conception rate for S&S donor cow embryos was about 80 percent, according to Schaeffer.

"We had a really good year (for ET conceptions)," he said.

The next show date for Schaeffer and Mankey is the Farm Show, where Sahara, Survivor, Smarty Pants, and several others will appear in the ring.

Both young men plan to make breeding and exhibiting Simmentals part of their future.

Mankey, who is studying for a career in accounting or law, said a job in one of those fields would be compatible with his passion for Simmentals.

The career would help "support my habits on the farm," he said.

Schaeffer is undecided about whether to go into his father's cabinetmaking business, Schaeffer Wood Products, or make use of a two-year full scholarship to Butler Junior College in Kansas to study ag business.

Schaeffer was offered the scholarship for his success as a 4-H livestock judge. This summer he was a member of the Lebanon County team that won state competition in State College.

Merrymeade Farm First In State DHIA Rankings

LANSDALE (Montgomery Co.) — Merrymeade Farm has been ranked number one by the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) with the lowest Somatic Cell Count (SCC) in the state. The somatic cell count is used as a measure of milk quality.

To achieve a low SCC a producer needs to have healthy cows in a clean environment. High somatic cell levels in milk indicate a bacterial infection (mastitis) that reduces the quality of the milk.

Merrymeade Farm goes the extra mile to ensure that their dairy cows are healthy and kept clean and it shows in the quality of their milk. The DHIA monitors the SCC in the milk to help ensure a quality product. Every month a sample of milk is taken from each of Merrymeade's 100+ cows and is sent to Penn State to be tested. Their milk is processed and then sold at their store on Valley Forge Road in Lansdale.

Somatic Cells are body cells present at low levels in normal milk. Penn State Cooperative Extension Veterinary Coordinator Dr. Lawrence J. Hutchinson said,

Progressive Ag Predicts Milk Price Drop

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — The Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro-Ag) is urging the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) to maintain the $1.65 per CWT premium (roughly 14 cents per gallon) on Class I milk (bottled milk) indefinitely.

Arden Tewksbury, manager of Pro-Ag, states prices paid to dairy farmers will drop 38 cents per gallon Dec. 1, 2001.

In an article dated Oct. 26, Tewksbury predicted a drop of 40 cents per gallon. Tewksbury thinks the prices will drop even further on Jan. 1, 2002.

The PMMB conducted a hearing on the continuation of the premium on Nov. 28. A quick decision by the board is anticipated.

Prices paid to area dairy farmers had reached a 20-year low in November 2000. Since last November, the prices paid to the dairymen have been increasing moderately. However, 75 percent of the gains have been wiped out during the last six weeks.

"it shows that they manage their cows extremely well and also shows that they have been doing an excellent job now and in the past. Once a cow has an infection the somatic cell count will not return back to the point it was once at. Cows must be clean and well managed to achieve a SCC that low."

The lower the SCC the longer

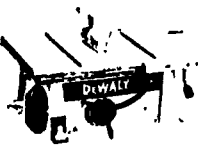

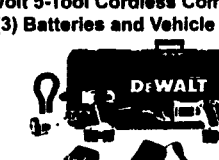

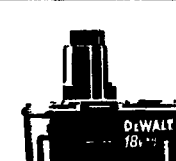

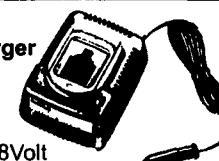

Recent figures released by the USDA indicate the total economic cost of producing milk in October 2001 was $20.61 per CWT. These figures mean dairy farmers will be selling milk at approximately 60-70 cents per gallon less than the cost of production. Pro-Ag strongly believes the U.S. Congress must pass legislation to allow a new pricing formula based upon the average cost of production. During the past 3½ years, Tewksbury has spoken to 150,000 consumers. Only six have disagreed on maintaining a stable price for milk.

The PMMB has released new out-of-store prices effective Dec. 1, 2001. In the Scranton and Wilkes-Barre area, the price of milk will decline from $3 per gallon down to $2.62 per gallon. Local dairy farmers will realize the total 38 cents per gallon drop.

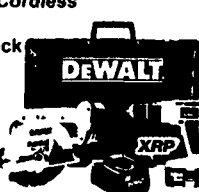

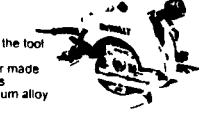

Pro-Ag may be reached at (570) 833-5776.

the keeping quality of the milk. Somatic cell counts are based on the number of cells per milliliter of milk. In Pennsylvania the average is 310,000; a SCC below 200,000 is considered very high quality milk, and Merrymeade's average SCC for the year was 57,000. That was so low that it ranked the number one on the Pa. DHIA year-end report.

Marketing, Distribution Discussed At Third Food, Farms Summit

tury," featured four secretaries of agriculture.

Arthur Brown, secretary of agriculture, New Jersey; Samuel E. Hayes Jr., secretary of agriculture, Pennsylvania; Hagner R. Mister, secretary, Maryland Department of Agriculture; and Michael T. Scuse, secretary of agriculture, Delaware, were present. Rick Foster, vice president, W. K. Kellogg Foundation, led the interactive session. The leaders spoke about their visions for the future of the food and farming system.

Mid-Atlantic Region Summaries

Brown noted that New Jersey hosts 830,000 acres in agricultural production and 9,300 farms. The 8.5 million people in the state provide a "big market basket" for the diverse agricultural products.

A few programs in the state include the Jersey Fresh program, which has been running since 1984. Also the Farmers Against Hunger program moves gleaned product from fields, or slightly blemished product from farms or grocery stores, to the state's soup kitchens at the rate of one million pounds per year. In addition, vouchers for senior citizens that are redeemable at farm markets have proven to be in demand.

Hayes highlighted that a challenge facing agriculture is the widening gap between the public and their food sources. He encouraged summit participants to be creative in their answers to the challenges. "Let us not try to freeze agriculture in one little snapshot or restrain it by public policies. It has to be able to grow, be vibrant, and be profitable," he said.

Hayes also encouraged growth in direct marketing. "Two-thirds of the U.S. market is east of the Mississippi, and those of us in this room ought to go out and get it," he said. "Consumers prefer to buy locally-grown food. In food distribution there has not been enough work done to identify local products. We have to tout that."

The real economic value of agriculture in Delaware is its sustainability over the long term, said Scuse. It is still the number one industry in the state, contributing an average approximately $800 million a year.

Delaware's 2,400 farms are run by less than one half percent of the state's population, noted Scuse.

He also highlighted the alarming rate of farmland being lost to development, a trend countered by the state's ag preservation foundations efforts. To date, 67,000 acres have been preserved with about 30,000 acres "on the books" to be preserved.

As for his vision for the state, Secretary Scuse would like to see other farm markets develop across the state. In addition he is hoping to expand assistance to the agritourism industry.

Recapturing local market share in Maryland is an emphasis of Mister. "We need to connect the people that grow these crops to where the money is," he said. Already the state hosts 62 farmers markets with 500 stand-holders.

The state also has a farmers market nutrition program where coupon books are passed out to senior citizens. Along with other states sharing the Delmarva Peninsula, Maryland is participating in and encouraging the Shore-to-Store program that connects the producer directly with the buyer.

This year at the summit the Mid-Atlantic Innovation and Leadership Blue Ribbon Award was given to Arthur Brown, who will be moving from his secretary of agriculture position to a faculty position at Rutgers University.

Educational Sessions Offered

In addition to the guest speakers, Thursday and Friday offered many breakout sessions. Topics included sustainable agriculture, the next Farm Bill, food industry trends, preparing youth for agricultural careers, nutrition, and innovative ways to market agricultural products.

Tom Kennedy, director of the Center for Food Marketing at Saint Joseph's University, Philadelphia, presented his ideas about key food industry trends. Developing brand loyalty, recognizing the importance of children's roles in a parents purchasing decisions, and developing a Website were recommendations Kennedy gave to food marketers.

To keep pace with tech-savvy consumers, he suggested producers would benefit from having a Webpage and selling directly to consumers. Gift packages, he suggested, were one unique and value-added method of shipping product.

Kennedy also encouraged producers to stay close to their customers and understand their needs, become a lover of change, and keep a close watch on the bottom line.

Thursday evening local chefs prepared locally-grown food for the evening's "Autumn Harvest Dinner."

On Friday summit participants had the opportunity to view the film, "Homecoming... Sometimes I am haunted by memories of red dirt and clay." The film is the story of African-American land loss and a chronicle of black farmers from the Civil War to the present.

On Friday presenters were Also touching briefly on biosecurity issues was Bret Rigby of the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association, formerly the American Dairy Association Dairy Council/Middle Atlantic.

The association is working with national and state agencies to "develop a system to deal with the possibilities of diseases such as BSE (mad cow disease)," Rigby said.

Other presenters included Brad Hilty of the Penn State Dairy Alliance and Dr. Ray Nebel of the Virginia Tech Department of Dairy Science.

Hilty urged producers to streamline their dairies by prioritizing investments and becoming more "capital efficient."

Top investment priorities include quality inputs, management practices, cows, and labor, according to Hilty.

Nebel focused on reproduction, asserting that herds where heat detection is less than 70 percent could benefit from one of several available synchronized breeding programs.

"On many farms we basically need to eliminate heat detection," he said.

The annual meeting coincided with the publication of a Baltimore Sun business article featuring MDIA President Myron Wilhide, a dairy farmer from Detour, Carroll County.

Titled "State Dairy Farmers Get Record-High Milk Prices," the article highlighted the recent, relatively good economic returns to producers, while also noting that 41 Maryland dairy farms have gone out of business this year, according to William scheduled to share about food security, a unique 4-H program, food security, how to reform policies through the Working Lands Stewardship Act, ethnic foods, how to conduct food systems research, and the benefits of wholesale produce auctions to small family farms.

Also on Friday high school and undergraduate agricultural research and internship participants shared ways to apply scientific principles to solve agricultural issues.

A panel discussion provided a forum to exchange ideas about small versus large farms competing for survival in the Mid-Atlantic region. The final session put forth ideas for the next steps to achieving a better food system in the Mid-Atlantic region.

The Farmers' Market Trust's mission is to increase the availability of fresh foods in underserved communities and to improve the connection between urban and agricultural communities.

do, and enjoy their work and environment, Stup said.

"People need feedback on a regular basis," he said.

Stup said he believes "a lot of dairy farmers farm because that's what they were put on the earth to do" and that sense of purpose should be shared with their work force as much as possible.

Biosecurity

Veterinarian Charles Gardner spoke on biosecurity issues, urging producers to take strict measures in reducing exposure of their animals to contagious diseases, both when buying cattle and through on-farm precautions.

"You have the right to insist on people not wandering through your farm and on clean boots and clothing," he said.

General principles that should be applied when purchasing cattle include testing them for diseases if possible, segregating the new animals, milking them last, and maintaining good ventilation and cleanliness.

If the source herd is known, buyers should test in advance for bovine virus diarrhea (BVD), Johne's disease, and mastitis. They should look at somatic cell counts and check for hoof and skin infections, Gardner said.

For Johne's disease, Gardner recommended that 30 cows of the source herd be tested, since many infected animals are not detectable.

"Testing individual animals (for Johne's) is not meaningful," Gardner said.

Particularly important in controlling Johne's disease is on-farm biosecurity, especially by separating calves from infected mothers immediately at birth and feeding colostrum from Johne's-free cows.

A characteristic of Johne's disease is that cattle are infected as young calves but show no signs of it until they are mature.

To control BVD, a viral infection that hampers reproductive performance and lowers immunity, Gardner said detection in baby calves is crucial.

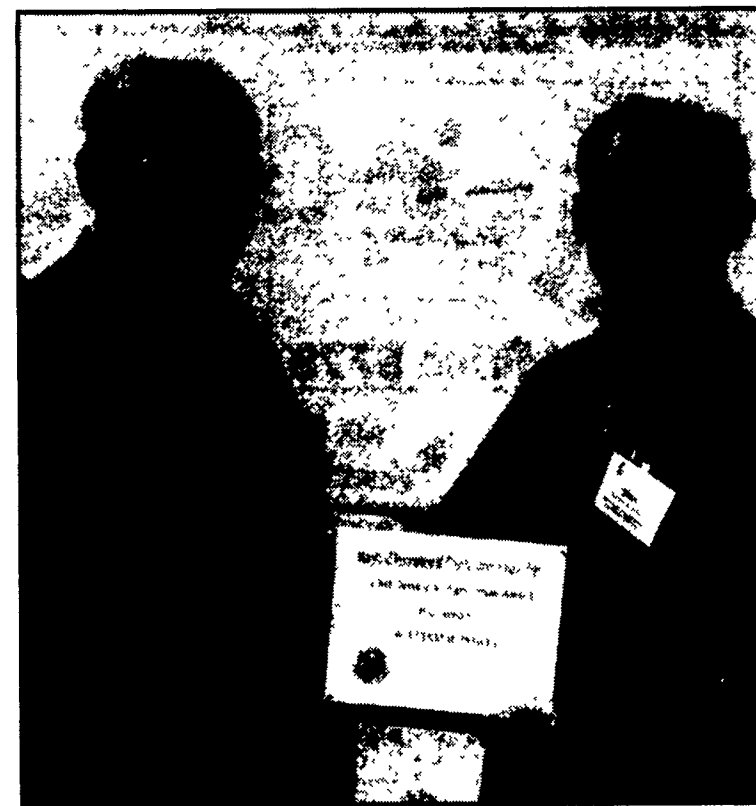

"The way to control BVD is by testing every calf that's born, especially the calves of purchased cows," he said.

The disease is insidious, Gardner said, because of the difficulty of detecting it in fetuses.

"Cows can test negative and be carrying an infected fetus," Gardner said. "You better test those calves when they're born."

Gardner outlined the need for boosting immunity in owned animals and in new animals prior to purchase, if possible. With stress as a cause for reduced immunity, particular attention should be paid to reducing stress in cattle at the time of purchase.

He also touched on the control of contagious mastitis, salmonella, and contagious foot diseases.

Penn State Dairy Alliance Offers BusinessSense Training For Dairy CFOs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Dairy Alliance has developed a program to provide hands-on training in data collection and interpretation for chief financial officers of dairy farms.

Called BusinessSense, the program combines formal instruction, group discussion and computer analysis in a small group setting so participants can learn from each other, as well as from the instructors.

According to Brad Hilty, information management specialist with Penn State's Dairy Alliance program, monitoring business performance is critical to maintaining a competitive position in today's dairy environment. Key decision-makers of the business must know what data is important and how to interpret it.

"The chief financial officer, who in many cases is the dairy producer and farm owner or their spouse, must know how to collect, organize, process and report data in a format that is easily interpreted," Hilty says.

BusinessSense has been designed to train key decision makers in dairy businesses to make decisions in a systematic and standardized way using data management and analysis.

The BusinessSense program will help participants answer these key questions:

1. What benchmarks are important in monitoring the performance of a dairy business? How are the benchmarks used to pinpoint bottlenecks in an operation?

2. How can standardization in data collection and organization improve the quality of information used for decision-making?

3. What is the importance of knowing and controlling production costs? Who is more profitable, the low-cost producer or the producer who stresses production?

BusinessSense is a series of three meetings designed to progressively build the participants' skills in information and business management.

— Session 1, Establishing a Baseline for Business Evaluation, features a lecture on "Benchmarks and Bottlenecks — Evaluating Business Performance." Participants will collect data required to complete the Pennsylvania Dairy Farm Business Summary and conduct a comprehensive business analysis.

— Session 2, Data Interpretation and Standardization, will include lectures focusing on "Analysis Results and Data Distribution and Implementing Standardization in Information Management Practices." A group discussion will help participants determine what management practices provide the best returns and identify opportunities to increase profits in their business.

— Session 3, Calculating and Controlling Costs of Production, will offer participants hands-on experience in calculating a standardized cost of production with Dairy COP$, a computerized cost of production model developed by Hilty. The session also will feature the lecture "Who retains the most money? Low Cost vs. High Production," and a group discussion on practical methods for controlling costs and maximizing returns.

Instructors for BusinessSense are Hilty and Jeff Hyde, Penn State assistant professor of agricultural economics and farm business management specialist.

The program is being offered around the state. Each session begins at 9:30 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m.

The Lancaster County Series, offered in cooperation with Lancaster County Cooperative Extension, will be conducted at the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center. The dates are: Dec. 14 and Jan. 22, 2002.

Sessions will be held in north-central Pennsylvania (Bradford, Tioga and Potter counties) on Dec. 19, Jan. 24 and Feb. 7, 2002. The location will be announced later.

The program will be offered in northwest Pennsylvania (Erie, Warren, Crawford, Venango, Forest, Mercer, Clarion counties) on Dec. 6, Jan. 7-8, 2002. The program will be held at the Link To Learn Computer Training Center in the Crawford County Industrial Park in Meadville.

The cost of the program is $150 for all three meetings. Additional individuals from a business can attend for an additional fee of $65 each. Checks should be made payable to Penn State University.

Crops Conferences Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Wildlife pest management and an annual update about new products for agronomics are some of the topics being offered at the Southeast Pennsylvania Crops Conferences in 2002.

The program is a cooperative educational effort between Agway, Moyer and Son Inc. and Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Annual programs that were previously sponsored by these organizations, such as Penn State Crops Days and grower/dealer meetings offered by Agway and Moyer & Son Inc., will not be conducted. The Southeast Pennsylvania Crops Conference is being conducted in lieu of these programs.

There are four dates and locations. Growers can attend any meeting that fits their schedule. The meeting for Jan. 22 at the Leesport Farmers Market, Leesport and Jan. 25, East Brandywine Firehall, Guthrieville, is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. registration, with a 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. program. Lunch is served.

The meeting for Jan. 23 at the Days Inn, Allentown and Jan. 24 at the Montgomery County 4-H Center, Creamery, will offer a day program, with four concurrent sessions. The sessions are scheduled to give producers maximum flexibility in their schedules and choice of topic. Registration begins at 9 a.m. and the program is scheduled from 9:30 a.m. to 1:45 p.m. Lunch is served.

An evening meeting at both Allentown and Creamery is offered especially for part-time farmers, starting with a 6 p.m. registration, dessert, and coffee served at 6:30 p.m., and program from 7 to 9 p.m.

Cost is $10 for daytime program by Jan. 15, $12 after Jan. 15. The evening program costs $5 by Jan. 15, $7 after Jan. 15.

Producers in Berks, Bucks, Chester, Lehigh, Montgomery, Northampton, and Schuylkill counties are invited to attend. Pesticide credits will be offered at all locations and a trade show will be in conjunction with the program.

Penn State University specialists and agency representatives from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Game Commission will be present. Sponsors of the Southeast Pennsylvania Crops Conference include Agway, Aventis, BASF, Dow AgroSciences, MidAtlantic Farm Credit, Monsanto, Moyer and Son Inc., Penn State Cooperative Extension, and Syngenta.

USDA Rep: Organic Rules To Be Practical

really lose the forest with too much fixation on the leaves."

Keating, an ag marketing specialist with the NOP, said that zero tolerance of synthetic materials and genetically modified organisms (GMOs) is not the main thing consumers look for in their food sources. They are more interested in wholistic production practices such as crop rotation, pasturing, and overall animal welfare, he said.

Although the organic movement originally gained impetus out of a concern for residual pesticides on food, that focus has broadened into a much wider concern for sustainable ag practices, with the nation's lawmakers increasingly joining that movement, he said.

The role that consumers play in organic policy should be a balanced one, according to Keating.

"It's important to respond to consumer demand, but we don't want a standard written by consumers," he said.

A finalized version of the NOP's organic rule will be released in the spring.

Reporting on an October meeting of the NOSB, Keating noted the board's recommendation to require that cattle and other ruminants have access to pasture in order to be certified organic, and the requirement that poultry have access to the outdoors be made more clear in the final rule.

The NOSB is also moving toward stricter standards for compost production, Keating said, with the final recommendations from a compost task force expected in early spring.

With organic farming now becoming subject to federal regulations, Leslie Zuck, executive director of PCO and organic farmer from Spring Mills, said that the nonprofit certifying agency is taking up the responsibility to insure that Pennsylvania producers have the information and training they need to continue operating under the USDA's national organic program.

"We're here to help you know what works and what doesn't work," she said.

PCO President Mike Brownback pointed out vast changes in the perceptions and practices of organic agriculture since his first attempts as an organic producer in 1982.

At that time, Brownback had decided that "America wasn't ready for organic produce," he said, and switched back to a conventional farrowing-to-finish hog operation. He continued to question the system he was using, however, and returned to organic vegetable production in 1991.

"I want to produce something my customers want," Brownback said of his decision to remain in organic agriculture. "I want to feel good about what I do, and I want to be rewarded at the marketplace."

"(Farming organically) has to be more than a mental decision. It has to be a philosophical decision," he said.

Brownback and his wife Terra operate a 188-acre organic vegetable, hay, and grain farm near Loysville, serving more than 200 community supported agriculture (CSA) customers as well as supplying various wholesalers in the area.

Other PCO representatives and farm inspectors spoke to the group on specific issues related to making the transition to organic farming and maintaining certification.

One of the topics that raised questions from the audience was the definition of buffer zones required to protect organically certified fields from chemical and pollen drift from neighboring fields and lawns.

Several producers pointed out instances in which the buffer zones required by organic regulations were inadequate against the drift of unwanted materials.

PCO farm inspector Al Johnson emphasized the site-specific nature of the rules, which take into account a variety of factors including lay of the land, width of buffer zones, and the type of vegetation in buffer zones.

"Every situation is different,"

Johnson said, with decisions being made on a "case-by-case basis."

Johnson said he conducts thorough farm inspections, which include looking at the practices used on neighboring farms and yards. Ultimately, organic producers "are under the responsibility to minimize the impact of the outside environment."

In some cases, that could mean planting a thick stand of fast-growing trees and/or widening the buffer zones on field borders, he said.

Johnson stressed the importance of recordkeeping in acquiring and maintaining organic certification as written proof of the materials applied to fields.

"Recordkeeping makes the difference between an organic farmer and a certified organic farmer," he said.

Other speakers included Alfred Walker, chairman of the PCO materials board.

Walker, a working chemist, focused on the formidable task of interpreting federal lists of accepted and prohibited materials, including that compiled by the Organic Materials Review Institute (OMRI).

Walker said his job is to help people understand the pitfalls involved in material selection and urged producers to be inquisitive.

"Many people don't think they should ask questions when they should," he said.

Established in 1997, PCO educates and certifies organic farmers within Pennsylvania, with the goal of assuring the integrity of organic products grown and processed in the state.

According to Zuck, PCO has certified about 250 farms to

ing to Rogers.

This year's sign-up list has her expecting more than 10,000 cookies for the exchange, scheduled Dec. 6-7 from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. daily in the hospital lobby.

The cookie exchange works like this: First, contributors bring six dozen cookies. They select 2½ dozen of their choice to take home with them. Another 2½ dozen are sold to raise funds for the hospital, and the additional dozen will be distributed to the firefighters and rescue workers at New York's Ground Zero.

"It's a way almost everyone can participate," Rogers said of helping the hospital and the rescue workers — with the added bonus of attaining unique varieties of cookies.

As founder and chairperson of the annual cookie exchange, Rogers constantly convinces friends, neighbors, and family to help with the event. This Thanksgiving, she told 25 dinner guests that they must each bring a batch of cookie dough.

After the Thanksgiving feast, the guests baked cookies in Rogers' kitchen — until the oven door fell off. Opening and closing the oven door must have worn it out.

"After that, we had to take the door off and put on manually whenever we removed cookie sheets — if that wasn't a job," Rogers said.

Auxiliary member Phyllis Wolf, Akron, is another staunch cookie lover. For breakfast, she has dunked a cookie in her coffee every morning for the past 47 years.

In addition to making cookies for the hospital, Wolf also spreads holiday joy by giving cookies to residents in a local nursing home.

For the past two years, the cookie exchange has provided $1,100 annually for the hospital.

"We are fortunate to have a hospital of this caliber in the community. I get a thrill out of making money for the hospital," Rogers said.

"You don't need to sign up ahead of time — just show up in the hospital lobby the morning of the exchange. Please bring your recipe to share."

The dozen of cookies to be sent to Ground Zero should be packaged separately and clearly marked.

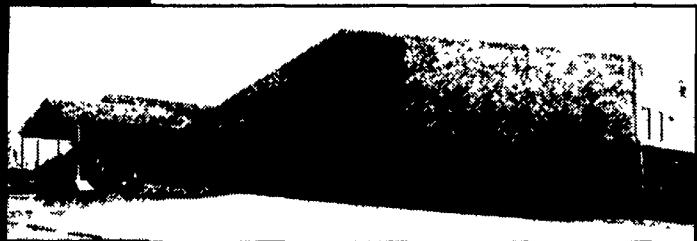

Both Rogers and Wolf make at least seven different varieties for Christmas holidays.

Rogers also loves new recipes. Every year she makes at least one new variety in addition to traditional ones.

"Some years are winners, and some are not," Rogers said of experimenting with unknown recipes. This year she made two new varieties that she considers winners.

Check next week's cookie feature in Lancaster Farming for her winning cookie recipes, plus many more favorites from our readers.

Vigilance Key In Face Of Potential Biothreat To Food

NEWARK, Del. — The possibility of an act of bioterrorism against the nation's food supply is on the minds of many Americans in light of recent anthrax contamination in the postal system.

"While the idea of deliberate pathogen contamination is not outside the realm of possibility," said Dr. Sue Snider, cooperative extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware, "Consumers can feel confident that the food industry has safety procedures already in place to prevent such tampering."

"The food industry in the U.S. is taking a close look at its own safety system," Snider said. "Most already employ safety controls called HACCP — Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points. Food business professionals are reviewing their HACCP plans to assess vulnerability and enact ways to prevent tampering with the food supply from the growing stage through processing."

"Consumers should pay close attention to the food they purchase," Snider warns. "As Americans, we tend to take tamper-proof seals for granted. But under the current circumstances, be more diligent. If something about a food doesn't look right, it probably isn't."

If you suspect a packaged food has been interfered with, she says, don't taste it. Call the Food and Drug Administration or public health service. Contact numbers are in the Government Agencies section of the phone directory. Or call the food manufacturer; contact numbers or e-mail addresses usually appear on labels.

Another way to be on the alert for possible food contamination is to listen to news broadcasts and read newspapers to find out about food product recalls. "It's amazing how few people actually pay attention to recalls, and it could be even more important during these unsettled times," she says.

"Safe food-handling procedures can prevent illness from disease-causing organisms such as salmonella, E. coli and botulism as well as contaminants such as anthrax," said Snider. "To prevent bacteria from growing in food, a general rule is to keep hot foods hot (above 140 degrees F), keep cold foods cold (below 40 degrees F) and keep everything clean."

"Washing fruits and vegetables is extremely important," she continued, "even fruits you normally peel, such as bananas and oranges. Microbes on the skin can contaminate the flesh. Wash grapes, lettuce and tomatoes in cold running water and use a brush to scrub produce with a skin, such as melons, carrots or potatoes, under running water."

Dr. Snider suggests washing knives and cutting surfaces each time a different food is cut on the board. "For instance, don't cut vegetables on the same board that has just been used to cut raw meat," she warns. "And don't just rinse your utensils. Scrub knives and boards well with a brush in hot, soapy water."

"In addition to bioterrorism concerns, cold and flu season is near," says Snider. "Hand washing goes a long way in reducing risks for these illnesses."

Wash hands thoroughly before and after handling foods, she said. Use hot water and plenty of soap. According to Snider, antibacterial soaps are no more effective than regular soap. Wash palms, backs, wrists, between fingers and under fingernails, using a brush, if necessary. Rinse well and dry with a paper towel.

"Run vegetable and nail brushes and synthetic cutting boards through the dishwasher to sanitize them," Snider suggests. "I don't recommend using wood cutting boards since they are difficult to keep clean."

No one can guarantee that a plan to contaminate the nation's food supply with anthrax or other pathogens may not occur, Snider acknowledged. Consumers can, however, stay alert and be prepared.

Oswego County Youth Competes For National Beef Ambassador Title

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Russell Sturtz Jr. of Mexico, N.Y., recently competed for the title of National Beef Ambassador 2002 at the National Beef Ambassador Competition Oct. 18-20 in Little Rock, Ark.

Russell, known as "R.E." by family and friends, is the president of the New York State Junior Beef Producers, president of the New York State Simmental Association, president of the Mexico Business Club, a member of the American and New York Junior Hereford Association and the future Dairymen and High Steaks 4-H Club.

Russell is a founding member of the New York State Junior Beef Producers, in the National Honor Society, New York State Math Honor Society, National Spanish Honor Society, National Silver Merit Scholarship winner and a member of the Farm Bureau Lobbying Group in Washington, D.C. He enjoys traveling, acting, singing, law, cattle judging, and his church activities. Russell plans a career in business and CPA accounting.

R.E. was selected as the New York Beef Ambassador in January 2001 and has spent the past year promoting beef at a number of venues in the state. The New York Beef Ambassador program is a joint project between the New York Beef Producer's Association and the New York CattleWomen. Those who would like more information on the project should contact Connie Kelley at (315) 245-3386.

Twenty-seven contestants from around the country vied for the national title and the $4,500 in cash prizes distributed among the top three places and $2,500 in scholarships from the American National Cattle Women's Foundation, Inc. Crystal Matthews of Carthage, Mo., won the title of National Beef Ambassador for 2002. Second and third places went to Andrew John Duncelman of Houma, La., and Scott Poague of Auburn, Ga. Lindsey Gibson, Arroyo Grande, Calif., and Alicia Randall, Pine Bluffs, Wyo., received honorable mentions.

The American National Cattle Women, Inc. conceived the National Beef Ambassador Program in 1988. In 1990, the competition was accredited as a national event by the Cooperative Extension National 4-H Program. In 1995, the American National Cattle Women received beef checkoff funding from the Cattlemen's Beef Board to expand the program which today involves all youth ages 15-19.

The purpose of the National Beef Ambassador Program is to train youth spokespersons for the beef industry. Through preparing for the competition, contestants become knowledgeable about the nutritional and economical values, by-products, food safety, and versatile uses of beef.

Trained youth ambassadors can address issues and misconceptions in schools, workplaces and in their communities, both urban and rural. Contestants participating in the National Beef Ambassador competition presented five to eight minute illustrated talks on the promotional aspects of beef and participated in a hands-on beef education workshop.

The national winners have the opportunity to travel throughout the country and speak to various clubs and organizations in both rural and urban settings on behalf of the American National Cattle Women, Inc., and the beef industry.

Md. Dairy Industry Encourages Progress

Zepp of the milk control division of the Maryland Health Department.

Reporting to about 100 dairy producers and industry representatives at the meeting, Wilhide announced progress toward the creation of Maryland Dairy Quality Management Alliance Program (MDQMA), a project being developed in cooperation with the National Milk Producers Federation, the University of Maryland, and the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

Once in place, the program will offer professional advice to individual dairy producers based on a team assessment of their farm. The program will cover areas such as herd health, cow comfort, biosecurity, disease prevention, and the management of feed, manure, finances and labor.

According to Wilhide, an MDQMA pilot program is being set up for five Maryland producers to show the cost and positive results of the program. To achieve the goal of making the program available to all Maryland dairy producers, MDIA is meeting with state legislators and other state and university officials to secure funding for its implementation.

MDIA has also been active in shaping Maryland's nutrient management program, providing comments to the EPA and to Maryland officials on new regulations, seeking simplification of the required plans, education of regulators, and funding for farmers to write plans.

Executive Director Paul Weller reported on MDIA's involvement in bringing Maryland into the regional dairy quality management alliance with 12 other northeastern states, milk packaging, and dairy product promotions, and educational opportunities for MDIA members.

Another highlight of the day was the presentation of a distin-

IMMUNITY DOESN'T COME IN A BOTTLE

Dr. Arlen Mills
Capitol Region
Extension Veterinarian

We often think that our livestock will be healthy if we can only find the right vaccine.

Vaccination is important, but natural mechanisms are an animal's first line of defense against infections. This would include things such as tears, saliva, enzymes, and the mucus lining the respiratory system. Even the skin is an important protector for the body, as it acts as a physical barrier to invasion by pathogens.

This fact becomes particularly evident as we consider the teat end in the dairy cow. Compromise the skin of the teat end and canal and mastitis results.

If a bacteria or virus gets past the physical barriers and invades the body, a second line of defense called inflammation goes into action. White blood cells attack and attempt to eat up the invaders. Dairy producers know these as somatic cells.

If these defenses are breached, the body has still another defense system which we refer to as the immune system. It is this system that we are hoping to enhance whenever a vaccine is given to our animals. When an animal is vaccinated, the body should respond by creating antibodies. But we know that this does not always occur. In studies done with feeder calves, as many as 15 percent may fail to respond and be protected when vaccinated. There are a number of possible reasons for this vaccine failure, so let's look at several major ones.

Genetics can affect the immune response. Compared to their ancestors, today's dairy cow is highly inbred. While we have selected for various production traits, we have ignored the effect on the ability to generate a proper immune response. I suspect that we may have selected for some of the reproductive problems that we have as well. The first step in solving this problem is to recognize it.

In order for cattle to respond to vaccination or fight off infections, adequate nutrition is necessary. Adequate energy, vitamins, minerals, protein, and clean water is needed. We need to be reminded that the immune system places constant metabolic demands on the cow, and it is one part of the cow which never rests.

With the adoption of total mixed rations in the dairy industry, most producers do a good job of formulating and delivering a high quality diet. However, diets may not be reformulated during periods of stress or intake may decrease as happens in the pre-fresh cow. Then nutritional shortages may occur which short-circuit the animal's ability to mount a strong immune response. Research has shown that nutrients such as copper, iron, zinc, selenium, and vitamins A and E can all have a great effect on the immune system. When one of these vitamins or minerals is deficient, it can inhibit the immune response or cause an adverse reaction to a vaccine.

We know that all cows go through some degree of immune suppression in the week prior to freshening and for a week or two after calving. Some of this may be due to a nutritional deficiency, as the cow eats less during this critical time. But part may also be caused by hormonal changes. Estrogen rises at this time and there is research to show that estrogen may suppress the immune system.

The stress on the cow at this time also raises her level of cortisone, which is an immune suppressor. For this reason I would not vaccinate a cow just before or soon after freshening. But any stress — such as being moved into a new pen, vaccination, hoof trimming, heat stress, and other management practices — can all interact with nutrition and the immune system in detrimental ways.

Another big immune suppressor is acidosis. In the acidotic cow, abnormal rumen bacteria produce gram-negative toxins. These toxins depress the normal function of the cells of the immune system. Cows affected by subclinical acidosis are immune-suppressed cows. The solution is obvious.

So when you have a "vaccine failure," what is to blame? Rarely in my experience is it the vaccine itself. It is usually a failure of either timing, vaccine handling, or failure to respond because of one of the factors discussed. Vaccine strategies will be discussed in a forthcoming article.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC) recently called on Congress to ensure that any economic stimulus package also helps meet the needs of America's farm families and rural communities.

"Revitalizing the U.S. agricultural sector is crucial," emphasized David Graves, president and CEO of NCFC, "especially when you consider that it is our nation's largest single industry, accounting for approximately 16 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly one out of every six jobs."

Pa. Winegrowers Can Compete For California's Market Share

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "We have to take on California," said Tim Gorman, president of the Virginia Vineyard Association (VVA). "And the way you do that is with higher-quality wines."

Gorman spoke Wednesday to about 45 grape growers and winemakers at the fall vineyard meeting co-sponsored by Penn State and the Pennsylvania Association of Winegrowers (PAW) at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

The key to success in taking away California's market share, Gorman noted, is to involve more grape growers and winery managers at vineyard meetings, at which both can benefit by sharing good growing methods and focusing on what consumers want.

The VVA, based in Ivy, Va., boasts about 200 members, according to Gorman. Cost of membership is $40 per year.

Virginia-made wine makes up 5 percent of total state consumption, and about 95 percent of the rest comes from California. Of the 95 percent, about 50 percent includes jug wine and 20 percent is fine table wine — mostly from California.

"We have to increase our market share," said Gorman. For the last decade, Virginia-based wines accounted for only 4 percent of state consumption. But because wine is available in shops and grocery stores, Virginia-based wine sales have increased.

Growers and winemakers can meet for VVA's annual winter conference, a multiday, in-depth technical seminar scheduled Feb. 14-16 at the Omni in Charlottesville. For more information, contact Gorman, in Afton, Va., at (540) 456-8298.

The growers and winemakers also meet at the annual summer "spray off," where sprayer manufacturers demonstrate equipment.

Gorman noted that through education and communication of the nonprofit VVA, "we're more savvy, and our industry is getting bigger," he said. "Politically, we're getting roots."

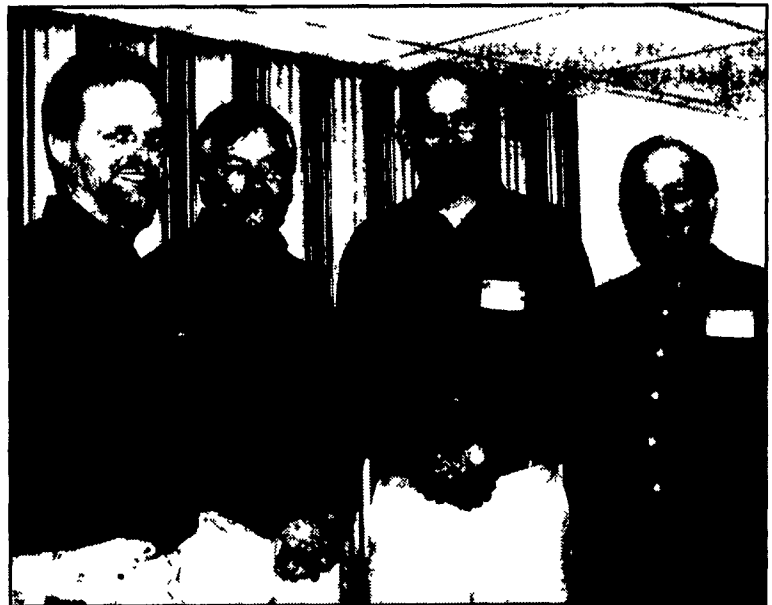

Mark Chien, Penn State multi-county extension agent, spoke about the successful completion of an extension service-directed survey conducted by an advisory group to PAW.

In the primarily viticultural survey, according to Chien, out of 200 mailed survey packets, 65 responded throughout Pennsylvania. These included grape growers and winemakers.

pending before Congress to give farmers a greater opportunity to improve their income from the marketplace, manage their risk, capitalize on potential market opportunities and compete more effectively in a rapidly changing global economy. Among its provisions, S.312 would:

- Clarify current tax law to allow farmers to cooperatively market value-added products through animal processing (the conversion of feed by chickens into products such as eggs, for example) on the same basis as products derived from mechanical processing (wheat into flour);
- Eliminate the "dividend allocation rule," which unfairly imposes an additional or third "tax" on preferred stock dividends paid by farmer cooperative businesses, reduces the amount of earnings that may be returned to its farmer owners, and limits their ability to raise equity capital for modernization and expansion

Travis, Penn State professor of plant pathology and extension fruit pathologist; Tim Gorman, president of the Virginia Vineyard Association; and Bill Nelson, vice president, government relations, American Vintners Association. The survey addressed what the primary issues were in the industry. Respondents noted that the big issues were related to vineyard health — disease control, vine decline, and vine health and nutrition.

Those issues are prominent in Pennsylvania because of the often humid, hot climate of the growing season, conducive to the development of fungal diseases and insect pressure.

Chien noted, however, this past growing season will provide "one of the best vintages we've ever had in Pennsylvania," he said, with the substantially dry weather.

The survey will serve as a tool to provide a plan of action. The PAW, in conjunction with Penn State, will try to come up with a strategic plan so that government funding can be secured to develop projects to help the vineyard industry. Those projects include research into better ways to improve vineyard health and to boost marketing of Pennsylvania-grown and marketed wines.

The average number of acres reported on the survey was eight. That's "more than we expected," Chien noted. Pennsylvania wine grape growers range between those who have a few vines to about 60 acres, noted the extension agent.

The meeting, which included one core and one category pesticide credits, will help the PAW and Penn State gather the information needed to develop a strategic plan. Developing that plan "enhances your abilities and multiplies your effectiveness," noted Bill Nelson, vice president, government relations, of the American Vintners Association (AVA) in Washington, D.C.

Nelson, who spoke at the meeting, said these types of gatherings allow "everyone to get involved," he said, to develop a plan — crucial to getting state and federal project funding.

Nelson said the AVA includes 650 winery members in 44 states. California, he said, comprises about 40 percent of AVA membership.

Grapes are the sixth largest crop in the U.S., Nelson noted, "almost as big as cotton." Pennsylvania is "one of the top 10 states," Nelson said, with a lot of active wineries and growers.

Other states, including North Dakota, now make wine. They had to change statutes dating back to 1933. But wineries are replacing tobacco-growing regions in many parts of the U.S.

Also at the meeting, Eric Miller, chairman of the Penn State extension advisory committee, spoke about developing the strategic plan. James W. Travis, Penn State professor of plant pathology and extension fruit pathologist, also spoke about control of powdery mildew at the meeting.

For more information about PAW, contact them at P.O. Box 400, Kemblesville, PA 19347, or call Mark Chien at (717) 394-6851.

NCFC Urges Tax Provisions For Farmers Be Part Of Stimulus Package

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC) recently called on Congress to ensure that any economic stimulus package also helps meet the needs of America's farm families and rural communities.

"Revitalizing the U.S. agricultural sector is crucial," emphasized David Graves, president and CEO of NCFC, "especially when you consider that it is our nation's largest single industry, accounting for approximately 16 percent of the gross domestic product (GDP) and nearly one out of every six jobs."

A key component of the economie stimulus package should include the tax provisions contained in S.312, the "Tax Empowerment and Relief for Farmers and Fisherman Act" (TERRF). The bill, introduced by Senators Max Baucus (D-Mont.) and Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa), chairman and ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee, along with 22 co-sponsors, would encourage cooperative self-help efforts by providing farmers with needed tax relief and incentives to help attract capital and investment.

The tax provisions of S.312 are part of a comprehensive package of recommendations by NCFC pending before Congress to give farmers a greater opportunity to improve their income from the marketplace, manage their risk, capitalize on potential market opportunities and compete more effectively in a rapidly changing global economy. Among its provisions, S.312 would:

- Clarify current tax law to allow farmers to cooperatively market value-added products through animal processing (the conversion of feed by chickens into products such as eggs, for example) on the same basis as products derived from mechanical processing (wheat into flour);
- Eliminate the "dividend allocation rule," which unfairly imposes an additional or third "tax" on preferred stock dividends paid by farmer cooperative businesses, reduces the amount of earnings that may be returned to its farmer owners, and limits their ability to raise equity capital for modernization and expansion

- Allow the existing 10-cent credit for small ethanol producers to be passed through by a farmer cooperative directly to and for the benefit of its farmer owners; and

- Extend declaratory judgment procedures to ensure that farmer cooperatives have the same rights to judicial review on tax-related issues as any other similar type entity.

USDA Lenient On Enforcing New Sheep And Goat ID System

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Enforcement of new identification requirements for most U.S. sheep and goats that went into effect Nov. 19 will be lenient during the first several months, according to indications from officials with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).

As part of the new federal program to eradicate scrapie in the U.S., most sheep and some goats 18 months and older are required to be officially identified. In addition, breeding sheep and goats must be accompanied by a Certificate of Veterinary Inspection (health certificate) to move into interstate commerce.

With producers and markets still learning about the new requirements, and some states still implementing a premises identification system, USDA inspectors will be more involved with education than enforcement in the coming months. The relaxed enforcement period will be its limitations, however. Willful disregard of the regulations would likely be the exception to any leniency during the first several months.

"Consistent with APHIS policy in the initial days of a new regulation, the emphasis will be on education," said Dr. Cindy Wolf, a small ruminant specialist at the University of Minnesota and chair of the National Institute for Animal Agriculture's (NIAA) Sheep Health Committee.

"APHIS has indicated that it will do everything possible to educate producers and the industry about the new requirements before compliance takes full effect," said Wolf. NIAA is the organization selected by APHIS to inform and educate producers and the industry on the eradication program.

Sheep and goat producers with questions about the new rules should contact their local veterinarian, or the agency managing the scrapie program in their state. By calling 1-866-USDA-TAG (873-2824), producers or veterinarians will be put in contact with either the State Veterinarian's Office or the local APHIS office. Information is also available on the Internet at www.animalagriculture.org/scrapie or www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/scrapie.htm.

USDA To Measure Pa. Sheep Inventory

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In January 2001, the total number of sheep and lambs in Pennsylvania was estimated at 81,000 head. This was unchanged from January 2000.

Total breeding sheep and lambs were estimated at 69,000 head and total market sheep were at 12,000 head. The total lamb crop for 2000 was down 1,000 head from a year ago and was at 70,000 head.

USDA's January Sheep Report Survey is the only chance to officially measure the entire sheep industry in Pennsylvania and the U.S. in 2002. Approximately 300 sheep producers will be contacted for the state of Pennsylvania and 14,000 operators for the U.S.

In mid to late December, Pennsylvania sheep operations will receive questionnaires in the mail and in late December and early January, respondents will be contacted by an enumerator either by telephone or personal interview.

As with all surveys conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), by federal law, your survey data is kept confidential. Names, addresses, and information about individual operations are considered private information and are exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act. Data on individual operations cannot be released to the public or to any other local, state, or national government agency under any circumstances.

NCGA Expands Database On Website

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has announced an expanded database available on its Website, http://www.ncga.com/biotechnology/know_where/know_grow_approved.htm, that catalogues most of the nation's seed company's biotech and high-value corn hybrids.

The database is part of the Know Before You Grow program, which provides the nation's corn growers information about the marketing implications of planting hybrids not-yet-approved for export to certain markets. Since its inception, Know Before You Grow has expanded its scope from biotechnology to also promote the consideration and marketing opportunities of high-value hybrids.

"The Know Before You Grow initiative is intended to provide corn growers a source of information about hybrids as they make their purchasing and planting decisions for 2002," said Leon Corzine, Assumption, Ill., farmer and chairman of the NCGA Biotech Working Group.

YEAR-END SURVEYS UNDER WAY

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in co-operation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

As we approach the end of the year, it is time to ask for your help with various projects to measure crop and livestock production for 2001.

The surveys mentioned below are conducted in all states so that state and national statistics will show agricultural production for 2001. To see the results of all these surveys, visit our Website at www.usda.gov/nass/.

Although many surveys will be under way, it is highly unlikely that any one person will receive all the surveys mentioned below. In fact, our office has tried to gather together various surveys going to the same person, but it is not always possible to find all such cases.

I hope you can find the time to help us make the most accurate "Agriculture Counts" by returning your survey form as soon as you can.

Who Gets These Surveys?

The list of surveys below may sound like a lot, but each one is targeted to operations that raise that particular commodity. These surveys are sampled, which means that not everyone will get a survey.

Although the largest operations will get a survey every year, only some of the medium and small farms selected for these surveys.

Only about half of the growers in Pennsylvania claim agriculture as their principle occupation and about half of the farms have gross sales of less than $10,000. This means that no farm is too small to reply to these surveys. Responses from smaller farmers is important, because your answers represent many other small operators.

A Big 'Thank You'

In advance, I want to thank any grower that responds to our request for your help to properly count Pennsylvania agriculture. If you have questions, call us at (800) 498-1518.

Now, here is a brief list of the end-of-year surveys happening now through December.

County Statistics Survey

The Acreage and Production Survey was recently mailed to about 15,000 farms, which is one-quarter of all farms in Pennsylvania. The sample is unusually large so that county statistics can be published for various field crops, fruits, vegetables, livestock, and poultry.

County agricultural statistics are extremely important to Pennsylvania farmers. Grower organizations, county extension offices, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and others rely on this information for research, defining, and promoting Pennsylvania agriculture.

Extension can re-evaluate staffing in each county office based on the number of farms raising certain crops or livestock.

County data has been important to determining the Farmland Preservation Program and Growing Greener funding.

Utility companies use this data to reimburse farmers for crops lost in right-of-way maintenance. The Farm Service Agency uses this data to measure crop loss during times of drought or flooding.

Survey results by county for small grains will be available in mid-February, with row crop data available in early March. County estimates for hay are usually released in mid-April with tobacco, livestock, fruit, and potato data available later in the year starting with tobacco estimates in early June.

To find county statistics, visit www.usda.gov/nass/ and click on "On-Line DATA BASE." Many additional crop, livestock, and poultry county statistics have been recently added to that site.

Dec. 1 Crop/Stocks Survey

This survey is going to about 1,300 Pennsylvania farmers. It measures final acreage, yields, and production for corn, soybeans, tobacco, hay, potatoes, sorghum, and grains stored on farms. A letter was sent to those selected and we will contact you for your help during early December.

The report, titled "Crop Production — 2001 Summary," will be issued January 11, 2002 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Off-Farm Grain Stocks

This survey was mailed to about 200 Pennsylvania grain elevators and other off-farm storage facilities. This survey, when combined with off-farm statistics, will give a post-harvest picture of grains in storage here and across the nation from 2001 crops and earlier.

The report, titled "Grain Stocks," will be issued Jan. 11, 2002. It includes both on-farm and off-farm stocks (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Dec. 1 Hog Survey And Chicken/Egg Survey

Although we contact the larger hog or chicken operations every month, the Dec. 1 survey contacts many more of the medium and smaller operations.

This more extensive survey sets the end of year inventory and leads to production, disposition, and income statistics for the year Dec. 1, 2000 through Dec. 1, 2001.

A letter was sent to about 450 hog farmers and 150 egg producers that were selected and we will ask for your help during early December.

The report, titled "Quarterly Hogs and Pigs," will be issued Dec. 28, 2001 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

The egg report is titled "Chickens and Eggs — 2001 Summary." It will be issued Jan. 29, 2002 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Annual Turkey Grower Survey

This survey was mailed to about 400 Pennsylvania turkey growers. This survey will show how many turkeys were raised here and across the nation and the average prices received by growers for their birds.

The report, titled "Turkeys Raised," will be issued Jan. 10,

USDA Awards $20 Million To 27 States For Risk Management Training

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA Secretary Ann Veneman has announced funding awards nationwide, totaling about $20 million in 27 states.

The projects are authorized under the Agriculture Risk Protection Act of 2000 for the development of new kinds of crop insurance plans and for ways to educate producers about crop insurance and other ways to lessen the risks of farming.

"We are broadening the producer safety net by developing new market-driven risk management tools, policy refinements, and educational opportunities," said Veneman. "We are diversifying risk management programs to meet the demands of a dynamic agricultural market."

The awards, administered by the Risk Management Agency (RMA), were given in several categories. There are awards for research and development of new programs and policies, including analyzing interest in and feasibility of developing new risk management products; awards that focus on teaching agricultural producers how to best use risk management tools; and awards to improve services to small, limited-resource, and under-served communities.

End-Of-Season Vegetable Survey

The survey was recently mailed to about 1,000 Pennsylvania vegetable growers and processors. It asks for acreage and production for the major vegetable in each state.

In Pennsylvania, the survey includes sweet corn, tomatoes, snap beans, strawberries, cabbage, cantaloupes, bell peppers, and pumpkins. Some of these are asked for and published by processing and/or fresh market.

The report, titled "Vegetables — 2001 Summary," will be issued Jan. 29, 2002 with all major vegetable production by state (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

KANSAS: National Crop Insurance Services, $153,000 - Research best techniques for insuring cut flowers.

Manure Hauler Certification Training Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Commercial and private manure haulers are invited to attend a workshop sponsored by Penn State and the State Conservation Commission.

The meeting will be Wednesday, Dec. 19 at the Berks County Ag Center in Leesport, from 9 a.m. (8:30 a.m. registration) to 2:45 p.m.

Preregistration is requested. Contact Robb Meinen, Penn State senior extension associate, at (814) 865-2987, or rjm134@psu.edu to register for this meeting. A fee of $10 will cover the cost of materials and lunch.

This classroom session, when coupled with participation in a summer manure haulers field day, qualifies manure haulers for certification under the Manure Haulers Certification Program. As an added benefit, all nutrient management plan writers who attend this session will receive three continuing education credits.

The program agenda will address environmental stewardship, odor control, manure spreader calibration, computerized record keeping, nitrogen and phosphorus management for crop production, possible impacts of phosphorus-based nutrient management, and conservation practices for nutrient management.

Both private and commercial haulers are encouraged to participate in the training. Register today.

EnviroScape Model Available For Loan

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Classroom teachers and Girl Scout, Boy Scout, and 4-H leaders who have soils, water quality, or pollution in their curriculum or have these topics required for a badge or study unit are invited to borrow the EnviroScape model from the Lancaster County Conservation District.

The EnviroScape is a miniature plastic watershed with a housing development, farm, business industry, sewage treatment plant, golf course, roads, and waterways that drain into a river or bay. It can be used to demonstrate point and non-point source pollution in a fun and visual way.

Cocoa powder sprinkled on the brown terrain around the housing development and farm represents soil. Powdered drink mix sprinkled on the green terrain of the lawns and golf course represents pesticides and fertilizers. Vegetable oil on the roads represents gas and oils. The educator supplies a rainstorm with a spray bottle, and it is easy to see the run-off and pollution.

The lightweight model, complete with supplies, lesson plan, and sturdy plastic carrying case are available for pick up on a two-week loan basis from the Lancaster County Conservation District. To reserve the EnviroScape, contact the environmental education coordinator, at (717) 299-5361.

USDA Invites Participation In Market Improvement Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA is inviting state departments of agriculture and other appropriate state agencies to submit proposals for matching funds under the Federal-State Market Improvement Program.

For fiscal year 2002, USDA has allocated $1.34 million in federal funds for market improvement grants. Federal funds awarded to any project must be fully matched by non-federal funds or in-kind resources. Program funds may be requested for a wide range of marketing research or projects aimed at exploring new market opportunities for agricultural products or improving the efficiency and performance of food marketing systems.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, which administers the program, especially welcomes proposals that reflect a collaborative approach among the states, academia, and the farm sector. States are also encouraged to develop proposals that have regional or national significance and that address challenges and opportunities in the following areas:

the global economy, consumer-driven agriculture, agricultural diversity, and technical innovation. The deadline for submitting FY-2002 applications is Feb. 15, 2002. The results will be announced in early July. States interested in applying for funds may submit proposals to FSMIP Staff, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA Mail Stop 0264, 1400 Independence Ave. SW, Washington DC 20250. Inquiries: (202) 720-2704. More information, including program guidelines and application forms, can be found at www.ams.usda.gov/tmd/fsmip.htm.

National Pork Board Plans 2002 Pork Checkoff Budget

DES MOINES, Iowa — The members of the National Pork Board approved plans for spending $55.6 million in checkoff-funded programming in 2002. Of that, $45.8 million is for programming determined at the national level and $9.8 million will be returned to states for local checkoff-funded programs.

"Throughout the eight-month budgeting process, pork producers volunteered their time to share ideas and work with industry experts to determine the most efficient and effective ways to increase demand for pork in the United States, increase exports and to communicate those checkoff-funded programs with pork producers and others," explains Marlin Pankratz, a pork producer from Mt. Lake, Minn., and chairman of the National Pork Board Plan of Work/Budget Task Force.

Pork producers on the Plan of Work/Budget Task Force, including seven board members and five other pork producers, recommended increased expenses for programs related to biosecurity, animal welfare and communications. The National Pork Board approved these recommendations during a meeting in Des Moines.

In other areas, funding for specific projects increased or decreased while the overall budget was stable. The 2002 pork checkoff budget is based on expectations for checkoff revenue of $49.1 million and expenses of $55.6 million, for a deficit of $6.5 million.

Overall for 2002, the producer leaders of the National Pork Board and state associations directed 59 percent of the checkoff funds be directed to promotion, 27 percent to research and 14 percent to consumer information. Nationally, the Board directed 65 percent of checkoff programming for promotion, 28 percent research and 7 percent consumer information. At the state level, 40 percent of the checkoff programming is for consumer information, 37 percent promotion and 23 percent research.

The approval of the plan and budget by the volunteer producer members was the final step for the National Pork Board in the checkoff budget process, which began in the spring. Now the USDA must approve the budget, which is expected to occur in December.

PFB Testifies At PMMB

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In testimony before the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) this week, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) recommended the overorder price for Class I (fluid) milk be adjusted to provide a base premium level of $1.65 per hundredweight of milk during the first six months of 2002.

The current overorder premium, paid to producers of Class I milk processed and sold within the state, stands at $1.40 per CWT with an additional 25 cents per CWT fuel cost adjustment.

During testimony before the PMMB Nov. 28, Joel Rotz, PFB's dairy specialist, pointed out a number of factors impacting Pennsylvania dairy producers.

Farmers in 49 counties have experienced 30 percent or higher crop losses because of dry weather this year, which may well increase future costs of production for dairy producers.

A recent downturn in federal order price levels for milk is expected to continue for the next several months.

Coupled with these factors is the expected removal of PMMB's fuel cost adjustment in February 2002 because of declining fuel prices in the central Atlantic region.

"We believe lower federal order prices combined with increasing costs due to drought, which will likely more than offset recent reductions in fuel prices, gives the +(Milk Marketing+) Board justification to act now," in adjusting the overorder premium level to $1.65 per CWT rather than holding future hearings, Rotz said, when the fuel cost adjustment expires.

Rotz testified that, based on current Chicago Mercantile Exchange futures prices for Class III and IV milk, the average price paid to Pennsylvania producers is projected to be about $13.95 per CWT during the six-month period of January to July 2002. He also noted that the Pennsylvania Agriculture Statistics Service estimates the Pennsylvania dairy farmer's average cost of production was $14.43 per CWT for the 12 months ending September 2001. Since Pennsylvania Farm Bureau foresees no reason why dairy producer's costs of production should decrease in the near future, Rotz said, this would mean a loss of $0.48 per CWT for the average dairy farmer in the months ahead.

If price needs for management, interest on equity and a reasonable profit are taken into account, the actual loss would be shown to be far larger. However, Rotz said, Farm Bureau recognizes that market conditions will not allow overorder premiums at levels high enough to guarantee profit margins to the average Pennsylvania dairy producer.

ducer at this time.

Rotz pointed out statistics that show milk production and cow numbers continue to decline over year-ago levels in Pennsylvania. The preliminary National Agricultural Statistics Service third quarter report indicates production is down 2.6 percent from last year with about 21,000 fewer cows.

"With cow numbers in dramatic decline in the state, the long term strength and viability of the state's dairy industry is at risk and this trend needs to be reversed," Rotz testified. "All of us in this room today, including the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, must work together to provide the best possible business environment for our state's dairy industry to thrive."

A significant part of the equation, Rotz said, "is providing the best possible price for all Pennsylvania producers."

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening. Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitis problems. Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening. Will help rumen function over freshening. Less feet problems and less stress.

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

Penn State Cooperative Extension To Offer E-Business Course

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension soon will offer a course to teach small business owners and operators how to use the Internet.

The Access Pennsylvania Main Street program connects small- to medium-sized businesses to the Internet, electronic commerce, and global trade. The program teaches Pennsylvania business people about the potential to dramatically increase access to resources and to expand their available markets.

"This program will provide small business owners the information they need to make good decisions about using the Internet in a way that will improve their bottom line," said Bill Shuffstall, Clearfield County extension agent and coordinator of the program. "And that is not always e-commerce, or selling things. We will show them how to get information they need to be effective."

Shuffstall is quick to point out that the Access Pennsylvania program does not try to sell Web page-building services. "However, we can advise small business people who have or want Web pages what they need to do to make them better," he said.

The Internet holds a wealth of information small business people need, according to Shuffstall, such as potential new suppliers, explanations of government regulations, the low-down on competitors and services of trade groups, just to name a few.

The 12-hour e-business course is taught in an easy-to-understand format in an informal classroom setting. A substantial portion of the course consists of hands-on exploration of the Internet.

"We will teach small business people how to use e-mail to quickly send and receive information needed in their operations," he said.

The program is new to Pennsylvania, but proven elsewhere.

"We have worked with the University of Minnesota to adopt and modify their program and make it a Penn State program," Shuffstall explained. "It was used in that state and others in the Midwest for more than four years. It is very popular there with small business people because it offers them so much practical help."

Penn State extension agents were trained last summer to offer the Access Pennsylvania Main Street Program and have been forging partnerships with community organizations to offer the program across the state. The course first will be offered in a number of counties in late fall and early winter, running more or less continuously after that.

For more information on the program or to see when and where the course will be offered, visit the Web at <http://www.ebusiness.extension.psu.edu>.

Penn State, Game Commission Study Hunter Movements

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Hunters will be able to cooperate this fall in a joint Penn State-Pennsylvania Game Commission study of hunter movement, success, and attitudes in Sprout State Forest in northcentral Pennsylvania.

During the Friday-through-Sunday period (Nov. 23-25) prior to opening day of the regular rifle deer-hunting season, university personnel, game commission staff, and state Department of Conservation and Natural Resources Bureau of Forestry workers were scheduled to contact a sample of hunting camp residents.

Then, beginning opening day, Monday morning, Nov. 26, through Wednesday, Nov. 28, and the following two Saturdays, a series of check stations along Rt. 144 will be staffed so that hunters traveling to Sprout State Forest can be asked to participate in this study as well.

"This is one of several research projects at Penn State related to deer management," said Dr. Gary Alt, deer management section leader with the Game Commission. "As we move forward with changes in deer management, we need to know more about when, where, and how hunters hunt.

"This study," he said, "will provide information to help us improve deer management on state forestlands. I hope hunters using Sprout State Forest will cooperate with us on this project."

To participate, some hunters will be asked to trace their day's hunt on a topographic map. A small group of hunters from camps and some hunters who drive into Sprout State Forest will be asked to carry a pocket-sized global positioning unit during their hunt.

These units automatically will record hunter movement. The study team will retrieve the unit, either as the hunter leaves the forest or from the hunter at camp, and download the satellite information into computers for later analysis.

In addition to these efforts to contact hunters both at camp and when they drive into the area, an attempt will be made to determine hunter distribution in the forest using aerial photography taken by the Bureau of Forestry during the study period.

"This cooperative research is using cutting-edge technology to study hunter movements, but still depends on the cooperation of deer hunters in Sprout State Forest," said Dr. Jim Finley, an associate professor of forest resources in Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Contact Finley at (814) 863-0401 if you have questions about the study.

Penn State and the Game Commission plan to repeat this study during the fall 2002 hunting season. As an incentive, all hunters helping with this study will have their name entered in a drawing for a Garmin GPS unit.

Penn State Clarifies Soy-Diesel Confusion

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Some people, depending on their definitions of the term "soy-diesel," may have misinterpreted recent warnings from an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences on the dangers of burning soy-diesel blended with diesel fuel in engines.

According to Dennis Buffington, professor of agricultural and biological engineering, the term "bio-diesel" is the modern term for transesterified oil (whether its origin is vegetable, animal or spent cooking oil).

"Bio-diesel meets ASTM Fuel Grade Standards PS-121 and it is perfectly safe and advisable to burn bio-diesel straight or blended with conventional diesel fuel in diesel engines," Buffington said. "In some regions of the country, the term 'soydiesel' is still being used to refer to bio-diesel that is derived from soybean oil."

In these regions, explains Buffington, the use of soy-diesel, either straight or blended with diesel fuel, is likewise perfectly safe and advisable since this fuel also meets the ASTM standards as well as pertinent government regulations.

However, in some parts of the country, the term "soy-diesel" currently is being used to refer to raw soybean oil that is blended with diesel fuel along with an additive.

"Although engines will run short term on this mixture, the mixture does not meet ASTM standards," said Buffington. "It does not meet government regulations, and users risk damaging their engines."

The bottom line, Buffington warns, is "buyer beware" of what he or she is purchasing to use as a fuel in an engine.

Two West Snyder Members Named National Finalists In FFA Proficiency Award Program

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — James Wright, 18, and Melissa McWilliams, 18, of the West Snyder FFA Chapter in Beaver Springs, Pa., were each one of four national finalists who competed for the title of national winner in proficiency award program at the 74th National FFA Convention Oct. 24-27, in Louisville, Ky. Wright competed as a finalist in the Poultry Production Proficiency area while McWilliams competed in the Dairy Placement area.

James Wright is the son of Dale and Teresa Wright of McClure. He is a June 2001 graduate of West Snyder High School. He has tapped into the organic foods market by raising organic poultry. He has two chicken houses with a total of 25,000 birds and raises up to 80,000 meat birds per year. One house holds the organic birds, which receive no medication and eat only corn.

Wright also markets his chicken manure to a local farmer. He plans to continue raising poultry until his budding musical career takes off where he can fulfill his lifetime goal of being a full-time musician.

Melissa McWilliams is the daughter of Lester and Barb McWilliams of Spring Mills, Pa. She has learned both the enjoyment as well as the hard work that comes from being a part of the dairy industry. She increased her placement responsibilities to include such area as milking, mixing feed, vaccinating, and being involved in the daily management of the operation.

McWilliams has invested over 4,200 hours of work time during the past three years in her SAE. She hopes to attain her American FFA Degree within the next year and continue her help with the family dairy operation.

Proficiency award programs recognize FFA members who excelled as agricultural entrepreneurs, employees, or volunteers while they gained hands-on career experience. Poultry Production and Dairy Placement are two of 46 proficiency award categories offered at local, state, and national levels. Wright and McWilliams qualified for the National Proficiency Award by winning the Pennsylvania title and earning gold medals on the national level. They received a trip to the National FFA Convention in Louisville, Ky., a cash award, and a plaque while they were recognized on stage at the National FFA Convention.

The Poultry Production Proficiency Award Program is sponsored by Wayne Farms LLC, Chore-Time Equipment Division of CTB Incorporated; United Soybean Board, as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. Monsanto, Animal Agricultural Group, also a special

Ready to Make

Around the holiday season, sneaking a warm cookie from the batch cooling on the kitchen counter is a mischievous pleasure. That treat—like walking into a warm kitchen where fragrances of vanilla and spices scent the air and there's a mug of hot cocoa waiting—connects us to childhoods past and reinforces holiday magic. It's a special time of year for home and hearth, families and fun, special foods and gift giving.

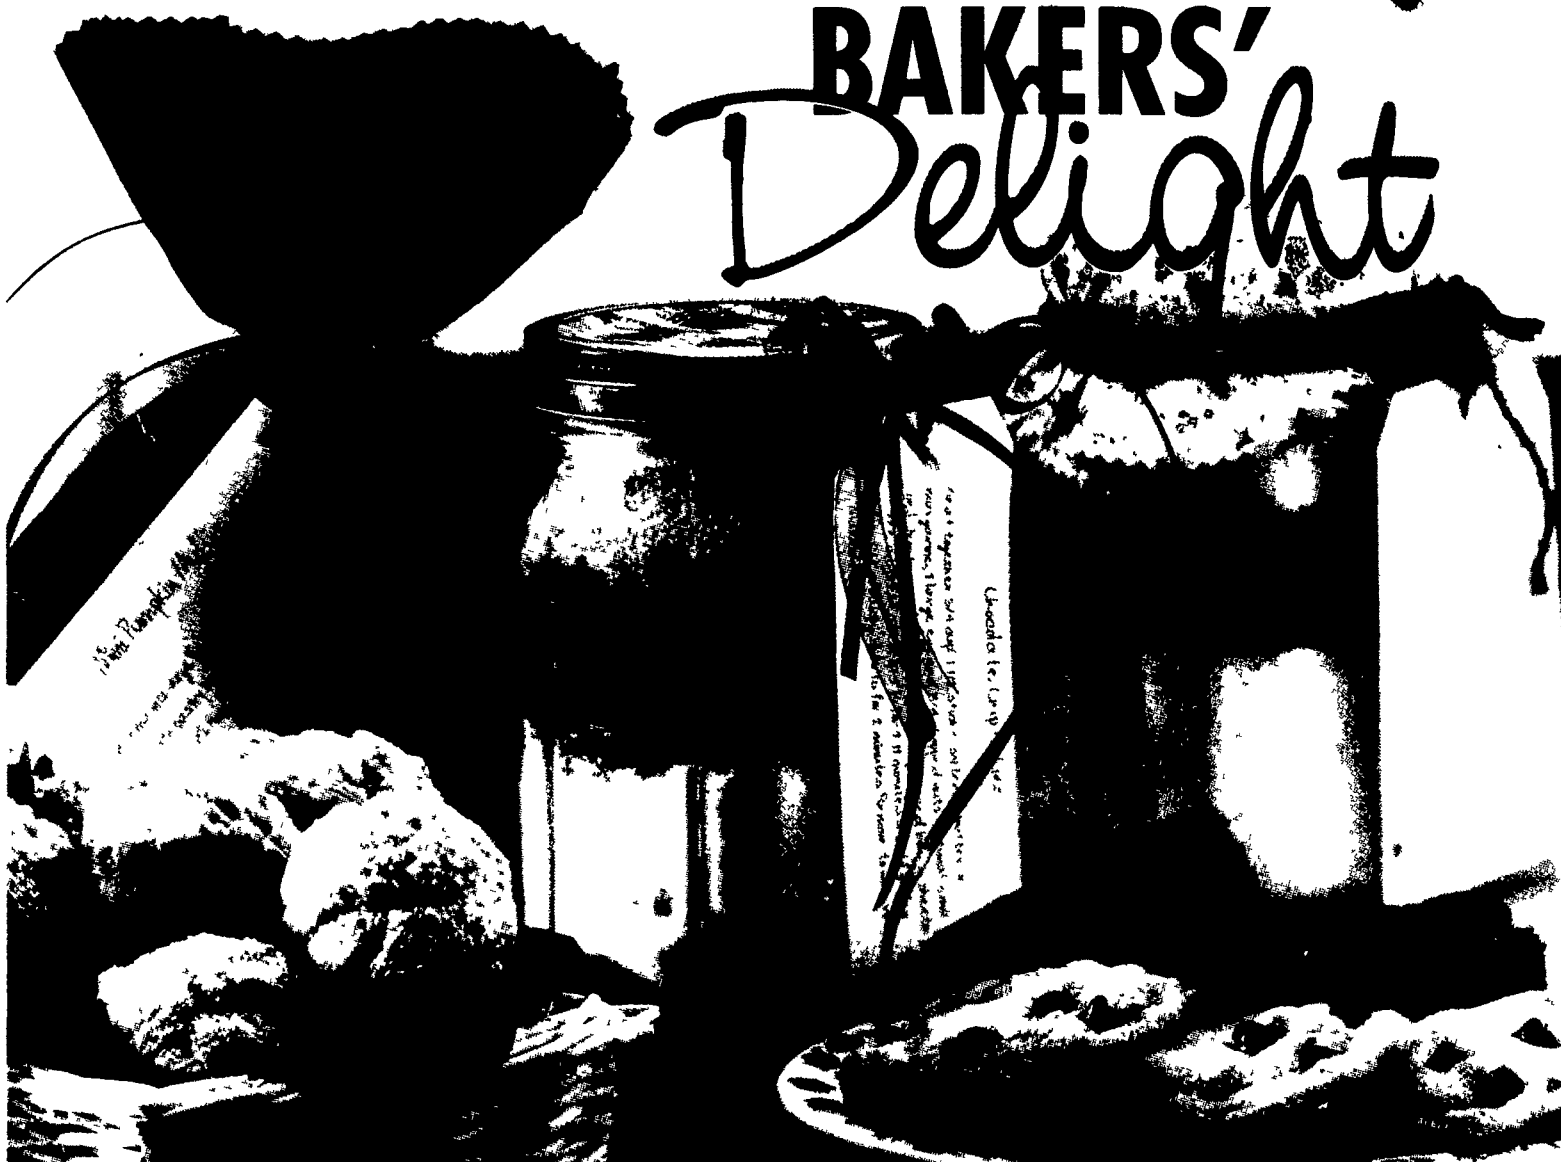

Offer a gift from the heart and make it easy this year for your favorite bakers to indulge their passion for sweet treats. Give them a cookie or muffin mix in a decorated glass jar or in a colorful fabric bag lined with a resealable plastic bag. It's simple to premeasure dry ingredients for family favorites like chocolate chip or oatmeal cookies, chewy brownies or mini pumpkin muffins or even festive pumpkin cranberry bread. The prepared mix will be ready for a quick stirring with added egg(s) and liquids.

Complete the gift by writing the recipe on a decorative recipe card and attaching it with a pretty ribbon or tying it to a wooden spoon. Include a jar of cocoa mix as the perfect beverage companion, and you have the makings for homemade treats sure to bring holiday smiles to everyone's face.

Market Manager: 'My Neighbors Are My Customers'

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff
NEFFSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Directing traffic has multiple meanings at the Erbe family's Brooklawn Farm roadside stand. Now in the midst of planting sweet corn field, the Erbes are preparing for the summer season. In addition, "we will farm 100 acres of field corn and soybeans," said Erbe who is joined by his wife Romaine, daughter Diana, a horticultural student at Penn State, and son Jeffrey.

We're serving the immediate community. We don't do a lot of advertising. We see our customers over the season and again during the season. We view what we're doing as being their garden. It feels like in a sense, we're an extension of the community. My customers are my neighbors.

The essence of what we're doing here is our own home-grown produce. That's still the key," he said. Strawberries, varieties of corn, sugar snap peas, and half-pint peaches are some of the home-grown produce that Brooklawn customers enjoy.

A seasonal business In April, budding plants and seedlings open the season which closes with Christmas trees the end of the year. During the off-season, the Erbes and employees take a vacation. They are not open for business, and attend to their families and other interests.

"I love to go to meetings and get ideas. I have more ideas than what I can get done," he said. One of these ideas is to open a second stand. (Turn to Page 2)

Tomato Processors Honor Growers At Luncheon

UNDY ANDREWS
Editor
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A man who has saved the tomato processing industry thousands of dollars, noted February 10, 2001.

James Kohl, vice president of Furman Foods, was honored with a service award in early February.

Cybil Smith, professor emerita of plant nutrition, was honored for 42 years of service at the annual Furman Foods luncheon.

The award was presented in front of about 50 growers and industry representatives at the annual Furman Foods luncheon during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Smith's hand fertilizer placement was crucial in cost savings and improvement in nutrient use by the plant, now adopted widely by the industry.

Smith's contributions saved a substantial amount of money in our cultural peak. Kohl noted.

The Master Grower Award for 2001 was presented to Greg and Frank Baitinger, Furman of Tr Valley Growers in California.

Furman Foods, now owned by Baitinger, has about 800,000 to 850,000 acres of tomatoes per year, compared to Furman's 65,000 tons. But Furman has plans in place to ensure continued production, he said.

"I have to move forward or be left behind," said Kohl. "We expect to get better at processing, and be bigger at it. This will enhance their total East Coast processing." (Turn to Page 2)

Three Generations Part Of A Growing Business In Landisville

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff
LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Urban sprawl is a challenge to farmers, but also an opportunity. David and Lois Watson, summer time temperatures seem to suit local residents' tastes for fresh produce from the farm, as they at the growers' state to stop are behind the roadside stand at Landisville Produce.

Consequently, the nation of availability of us helps with the cantaloupes, watermelon and pumpkin purchase the product has led to a full time job for the Landis family.

David and Lois have four children — David, Sharon, Denny, and Darvin — plus eight grandchildren. Darvin lives on the home farm helps with the cantaloupes, watermelon and pumpkin produce sold at the Landisville Produce stand.

Landisville, father John 5 David and Lois estimate, that 90 percent of what is sold at the stand, not from the tomato stand, but from the produce stand.

"We're doing well with Silver King and Tropic Sweet are the best sellers for Landis. That's what we've been under way since 10 years, when we stopped growing tobacco at the station," he said. Alan Michael, Penn State horticulture, is connecting the dots.

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — About 600 different flower varieties were on display in trials here last year at the Penn State Southeast Agricultural Research and Extension Center. In this photo from mid-July, the two largest trials, Streptocarpus and Impatiens, are the focus of the study. David Watson said the variety studies, an effort on the part of the center, have been under way since 10 years, when we stopped growing tobacco at the station.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards) Joyce Bupp

Somehow, they must have known it was hunting season.

So they zip through our line of vision, close enough to be tantalizing, but too fast to nail.

Finally, patience and persistence pay off. Weapon in hand, I draw back my arm, take careful aim and...whack!

A big, fat fly bites the dust.

It's stalking season on the flies of fall. No rifles, no ammo, no heavy coats, nor orange hats, nor licenses necessary to go after this game. Just a good, sturdy flyswatter.

Typical of most prey, the flies show themselves repeatedly in the period of time prior to the hunt. They buzz past my nose while I'm trying to read the newspaper. Alight on my wrist as I maneuver the mouse around my cow-spotted mousepad at the computer. Dive-bomb my ear while I'm stuffing checks in envelopes to pay end-of-month bills.

Flies aren't a problem during most of the usual

"fly season" here in our cool, heavily shaded house. They prefer the more light, sunny, airy locales, like around the back porch where they instantly show up as uninvited guests at every meal we enjoy there during the warmer months.

Cooler weather usually wipes out their kind, or at least most of them. But like all pests — disease, bacteria, weeds — a few of the hardest always manage to survive even the harshest conditions. Environmental hardship only strengthens and renders them more durable.

Which surely must be the case with fall flies. Survivors slip in over heads as we enter and exit the house, taking cover in the numerous nooks and crannies hereabouts. Some surely have enough instinctive smarts to wiggle through the cracks between the stormdoors and the door frames of our old and slightly-less-than-squared-up house. Then, attracted to the light and warmth put off by lightbulbs, the pests choose to hang out in the same space we people occupy.

It's not that flies actually take up that much room. In fact, if they'd stay out of the way, we'd probably practice a live-and-let-live philosophy. But, no, they have to aggressively flaunt their presence in their unique, highly-irritating way.

If nothing else, flies of fall earn points on persistence, whining and buzzing about one's person until they become intolerable. Then, as the television cooking show host Emeril would proclaim: Bam! Open season on flies.

Truth be known, there are probably more fly refugees in the house right now than we realize. Fortunately (or unfortunately), we are blessed with a ready supply of nature's own fall fly predator brigade — spiders.

Our spider army is extremely vigilant, constantly spinning web traps over door frames and around windows, in lampshades and among the curtains, around the bookcase and framing the wall photographs. And, though I periodically sweep away the spiders' fly traps, they are much more efficient laborers than I. We house Olympic-record-setting spiders which can respin their webs before I make it halfway around the room with the vacuum cleaner hose.

Still, we rarely see any flies actually stuck there in the network of webbing. No doubt that's because Olympic-record-setting spiders have to eat a lot of insect protein to keep up their strength, which in turn enables them to pick up the pace, and spin more webs to catch more lunch.

Sort of a self-perpetuating cycle.

While I'm grateful to the spiders for their efficiency, they still manage to miss a few. So, I'm proud to report that my latest hunt was a success, ending with a satisfying whack! from my trusty weapon and the demise of one particularly big "horse fly," slow of wing and excessive in persistent peskiness.

Say, do taxidermists mount flies for wall trophies?

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers. Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible... a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3x5 map.

The map sold extremely well — until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, HR, RI)

Why every fisherman and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into, there's a sure way to up your odds — simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters... many of them overlooked. From Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River... thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.

Consuming Thoughts

Fay Strickler

The holiday season brings hustle and bustle. Time is critical and family members have so many activities going on that meal management can be stressful.

While the ultimate goal may be a family banquet, or even a series of feasts, many meals might be classified as "catch-as-catch-can."

Some recipes for eat-on-the-run meals and other dishes that require only a short preparation time are made with pasta. Because pasta dishes provide enjoyable nutritious dining and are a pleasant solution to the problem of "What should I make for dinner tonight?" It is especially practical for hurry-up menus while you are preparing for the holidays. Pasta is convenient and versatile.

Sauces favorites can be completed and frozen to await that moment when hunger strikes and you're bankrupt in time and ideas. Prepare sauces for the freezer in portions for one or two. It takes only about 10 minutes to bring the frozen sauce to a boil—just long enough to cook the pasta. At the same time stock your refrigerator with a supply of salad ingredients to complete your ever-ready meal.

Pasta casseroles with sauces, such as lasagna may be frozen for two to three weeks. These casseroles can go from freezer to oven to table. Remember to add an extra 20 minutes to the recommended baking time—usually about 45 minutes—when you go straight from the freezer to the oven.

If you can let the casserole thaw in the refrigerator, it cuts down on preparation time even further.

Begin baking the casserole covered. Then remove the cover during the last 15 or 20 minutes. Casserole dishes may also be frozen in smaller portions adapted to one, two, three or more to feed varying numbers of people—family and drop-in guests. This time of year, you never know what the day might bring. Even if you don't have a sauce in the freezer, pasta always stars as a fast nutritionally-adequate meal everyone loves—especially spaghetti, macaroni and noodles made from 100 percent durum wheat. That guarantee on the package becomes doubly important in dishes that are cooked, frozen and reheated according to the Durham Wheat Institute.

Durum-based products resist the tendency to turn mushy in cooking like some pasta. In fact, in Italy it is illegal to make pasta from any wheat other than durum. Anything else, it might be called something like a "crime!"

The preparation is simplicity itself. Just bring two quarts of water and one tablespoon of salt to a boil for each eight ounces of pasta. If you are cooking one or two servings—two to four ounces—use one quart of boiling water and one and one half teaspoons salt.

Add the pasta slowly—macaroni, spaghetti, or noodles—and cook until tender, yet firm to the bite. Drain the cooking water. Toss the pasta with butter or olive oil, parsley, Parmesan cheese and julienne slices of cooked ham if you have some on hand. With or without the ham, this fills the need—quick, easy, and delicious!

Home-Prepared Gifts Express Good Taste

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — In today's busy society, home-made gifts are becoming more and more appreciated by recipients. Home-prepared gifts are often one-of-a-kind treats.

At a recent workshop at Lancaster's Home and Farm Center, Nancy Wiker, Lancaster County Extension family and consumer science agent, demonstrated many ways to prepare unique gifts that express thoughtfulness and good taste.

Use attractive jars with computer- or hand-generated labels to package food gifts. You may want to fill a basket with several related items such as caramel-spice apple butter and muffins or a pound cake. Or how about a muffin tin filled with an assortment of jars filled with specialty spreads and jams.

Need ideas? Here are some from Wiker's workshop.

Blueberry Syrup

2 quarts blueberries
6 cups water, divided
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
3 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Crush blueberries. Combine blueberries, 2 cups water, and lemon peel in a medium saucepan. Simmer 5 minutes. Strain through a damp jelly bag or several layers of cheesecloth. Combine sugar and 4 cups water in a medium saucepan, boil to 260 degrees. Add blueberry juice to sugar syrup. Boil 1 minute. Stir in lemon juice. Ladle into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust two-piece caps. Process 10 minutes in boiling water canner. Yield: about 3 pints.

Maple Walnut Syrup

1½ cups corn syrup
1 cup maple syrup
½ cup water
½ cup sugar
2 cups walnut pieces
Combine syrup, maple syrup, water, and sugar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat and simmer syrup until thick, about 15 minutes. Stir in nuts; cook 5 minutes. Ladle hot syrup into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust two-piece caps. Process 10 minutes in boiling-water canner. Yield: 4 half-pints.

Gift tag directions: To serve Baked Brie With Maple-Walnut Syrup:
4½-ounces round Brie cheese
½ cup maple walnut syrup

Remove top rind from Brie. Cut cheese into four wedges; keeping wedges in a round, place on a lightly greased baking sheet. Spoon syrup over cheese. Bake at 450 degrees for 2-3 minutes or until just soft. Serve immediately with fresh fruit and crackers. Yield: 4 servings.

Caramel-Spice Apple Butter

4 pounds Rome apples
4½ pounds Granny Smith apples
1 cup water
4 cups sugar, divided
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon ginger
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Wash apples; remove stem and blossom ends. Cut into pieces, do not peel or core. Combine apples and water in a large covered saucepan. Cook until soft, about 30 minutes. Press through a sieve or food mill. Measure 12 cups apple pulp; set aside. Heat 2 cups sugar in a separate saucepan, stirring until sugar melts and turns a rich golden brown. Carefully combine the caramelized sugar and the apple pulp.

Sugar will crackle and harden. Add the remaining 2 cups sugar and spices. Cook, uncovered, until thick enough to round up on a spoon. As mixture thickens, stir frequently to prevent sticking. Stir in lemon juice. Ladle into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust two-piece caps. Process 10 minutes in boiling-water canner. Yield: about 6 half-pints.

Spiced Pumpkin And Pecan Butter

29-ounce can solid-packed pumpkin plus ½ cup water OR
3½ cups pumpkin puree prepared from scratch zest of one orange (outer peel only, no white pith)
2 cups brown sugar
3 tablespoons strained fresh orange juice
3 tablespoons strained fresh lemon juice
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
¼ teaspoon ground ginger pinch cloves
¼ cup pecans or walnuts, lightly toasted

Combine in a heavy-bottomed stainless steel saucepan the pumpkin (and water if using canned pumpkin), orange zest, sugar, orange juice, lemon juice, cinnamon, salt, allspice, ginger,

Gifts From Nature's Treasures

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Lilly Hershey combines her loves for flower arranging and gardening in preparation for the holidays. At the Lebanon County Extension holiday program, Hershey taught workshops on using Treasures From Nature.

A member of the Lebanon County Flower Club, Hershey demonstrated how easy it is to select items from garden, fields, and yards to make spectacular holiday arrangements. Osage oranges, also called fence row apples, can be used indoors and outdoors for holiday decorating. An easy method to arrange them and cloves. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring constantly; lower heat and simmer the mixture, stirring it very often with a wooden spoon, until it becomes very thick, about 15 minutes. Sample the butter and add a little more of any or all the spices you like (flavors will blossom in storage). Add more sweetening if your taste buds require it.

Stir in nuts and continue to cook for another 2-3 minutes. Cool and fill attractive sterilized jars. Store for up to four weeks in the refrigerator. Yield: about 4 cups.

Note: To toast pecans or walnuts: spread the shelled nuts in a baking pan and bake them for about 5 minutes in a 350 degree oven, stirring several times (they scorch easily). Bake just until they are slightly toasted and fragrant, not actually browned. Cool the nuts to regain crispness before using them.

Gift tag directions: Spiced Pumpkin And Pecan Butter
Store for up to four weeks in the refrigerator.

Swedish Nuts

1 egg white, slightly beaten
2 cups pecan or walnut halves
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons ground cardamom
Heat oven to 300 degrees. Grease jellyroll pan. Mix egg white and pecan halves in medium bowl until pecans are coated and sticky. Mix sugar and cardamom, sprinkle over pecans. Stir until pecans are completely coated. Spread pecans in a single layer in pan. Bake about 30 minutes or until toasted. Cool completely or serve slightly warm. Store in tightly covered jar for up to three weeks.

is to use the tree-shape wire or metal form, traditionally used in Williamsburg-style arrangements for apples. Instead of placing apples on the holder, use osage apples. Fill in the spaces with a variety of holiday greens gathered from your yard or a friendly neighbor. Apples and other fruits can be used to decorate simple green wreaths. Insert picks into the fruit to hold in place. The fruits will need to be replaced several times throughout the season if placed indoors. Outdoors, the fruits may last longer, but also discolor with age.

Hershey uses herbs from her garden to make specialty vinegars, salad dressings, vinaigrettes, seasoning mixes, and herbal mustards and butters.

"Herbs have been enjoyed for centuries," Hershey said. "Ancient cultures used them for medicinal cures, and Victorians enjoyed the fragrance and beauty of herbs."

Hershey uses herbs for decorations and to season many different varieties of foods. She said that herbal vinegars add new flavor and tenderize meats and seafood. Herbal vinegars are especially great to marinade meats — especially venison.

Also, splash some herbal vinegar on French fries, dash a bit over steamed vegetables, chill and serve as an appetizer.

Use herbal vinegar to thin down thickened store-purchased salad dressings such as ranch dressing.

Mix fruited vinegars with mayonnaise, cream cheese or plain yogurt for a great dip.

You can interchange fresh and dry herbs in most recipes, but remember that dry herbs impart a stronger flavor than fresh herbs so use less when adding dry herbs to recipes if fresh is specified or vice versa.

An easy way to grind herbs is to use a coffee grinder. Make your own seasoning mixes using dried herbs to season salads, soups, vegetables, meat, seafood, and poultry. Here are three of Hershey's favorite seasoning mixes that she places in a jar or shaker for easy access when cooking.

Seasoning Mix 1

2 teaspoons thyme
2½ teaspoons savory
2 teaspoons sage
2 teaspoons rosemary
2½ teaspoons marjoram

Seasoning Mix 2

3 teaspoons thyme
1½ teaspoon sage
2½ teaspoons rosemary
3 teaspoons marjoram

Seasoning Mix 3

2 tablespoons basil
1 teaspoon oregano
2 tablespoons onion powder
½ teaspoon dried grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 teaspoon celery seed

Here are some of Hershey's favorite recipes for those who would like to make them for gifts or for their own personal use.

Fruit Vinegars

(Turn to Page B8)

Using treasures from nature, Lilly Hershey prepares a wreath and table centerpiece. At right, osage oranges are placed on the Williamsburg-style apple holder with boxwood and assorted greens inserted in the spaces. At left, a boxwood wreath is decorated with apples, bows, twigs, and cinnamon sticks.

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Everyone who knows Renee Blatt realizes she has a passion for bees and honey.

"Honey bees are very gentle insects," she claims.

To demonstrate how docile honey bees can be, Renee allowed 10,000 live bees to form a bee beard around her face.

"I got stung only once — under my face," Renee said of the promotion she performed recently in Palo Cedro, California.

"The bees kind of clamp on to your face with their little legs and mouths, and it tickles when they fan their wings," Blatt said.

"If you know how to work bees, you can very easily do something like put them on your face."

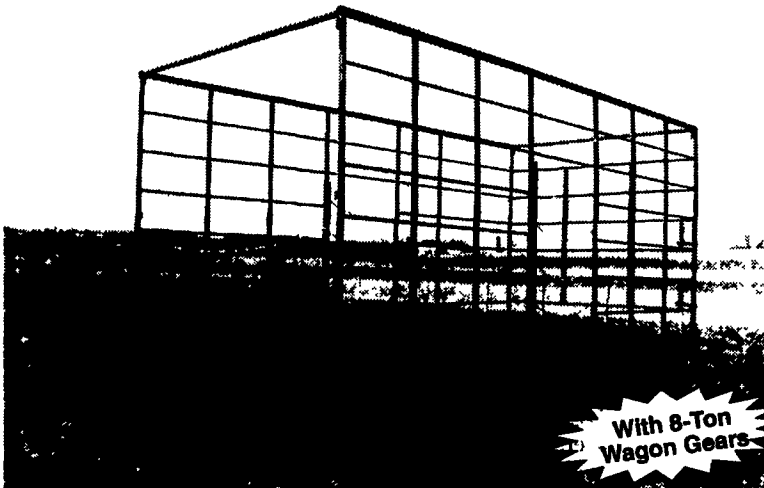

Blatt served a year as Pennsylvania Honey Queen before vying for the national crown in January. As the national queen, Blatt has traveled throughout the U.S. promoting the bee industry. In January 2002, Blatt will crown her successor during the American Beekeeping Federation Convention conducted in Georgia.

At home in Lebanon, Renee tends her bee hives and helps on the family's dairy farm. She is vice president of the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association.

About 10,000 bees form a bee beard around the face of Renee Blatt, American Honey Queen.

Turnip Pie

2 cups mashed turnips
1 cup milk
3 egg yolks, beaten
¾ cup brown sugar
1¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks, stiffly beaten
1 unbaked pie shell
Mix turnips and milk. Add egg yolks, sugar, spices, and salt; mix well.
Fold in egg whites. Pour into pie shell. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes, reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake 20 minutes longer or until filling is firm.

ANSWER — Sally Reinoehl requested a recipe for grape marmalade. Thanks to a Syracuse reader for sending this recipe from the Cooperative Extension of the University of Georgia.

Grape Marmalade

Select grapes about half of which are slightly under ripe. Wash and stem the fruit. Separate the pulp from the skins. Cook pulp for 10 minutes and press through a sieve or colander to remove seeds. Add ¾ cup water to each quart of skins and boil until tender. Put the pulp and skins together and measure. Sterilize the canning jars. For every quart of the mixture, use one pound sugar. Bring the fruit to a boil. Add the sugar; cook rapidly, stirring frequently until the jelling point is reached. Pour hot marmalade into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims and adjust lids. Process 5 minutes in a boiling water bath.

ANSWER — Sally Reinoehl asked why her white bread always gets a hard crust and becomes quite dark. A reader wrote that she read to avoid a dark, hard crust on bread, place a small dish of water in the oven while the bread is baking.

Another reader suggested turning down the oven temperature by 25 degrees. Every oven is different so try lowering the temperature until satisfied with the results, although it may require adding five minutes baking time if needed. The reader always bakes white bread at 325 degrees. When the bread is removed from oven, rub butter on the top crust to soften it.

6-ounce can tomato paste
½ cup minced fresh parsley

ANSWER — Ella Hartranft, Bernville, wanted a recipe for fruit cake that includes all dried fruits such as apricot, peaches, pears, pineapples, raisins, and dates. Thanks to Faye Milevid, Delta, for sending a recipe that she received from a friend at least 50 years ago. Faye writes that it is a good old-fashioned cake. After cooling, she stores the cake in a tin box with cheesecloth soaked in brandy or whiskey to keep it moist.

Fruit Cake

1 pound currants
2 pounds raisins
¼ pound lemon peel
¼ pound orange peel
½ pound citron
1 pound dates
1 pound figs
1 pound nuts
Cherries, pineapple to decorate
1 pound butter
12 eggs
1 pound sugar
1 pound flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt

Cut fruit and soak overnight in grape juice to just cover. Drain and save liquid. Cream together butter, sugar, and beaten eggs, one at a time. Beat well after each addition. Sift flour, spices, baking powder, and salt. Add to butter and sugar mixture.

Pour off any excess grape juice from fruit and add to batter. Flour the fruit (that flour is extra, requires about 1 cup or more of flour) and add fruit to batter. Mix well. Add nuts. Do not soak nuts in juice.

Bake in 275 degree oven about 2½-3 hours until cake is done. Use greased and floured loaf pans or tube pans of your choice.

Field Dressing Your Deer

It's that time of year when over 2.5 million hunters in Pennsylvania head out to the woods. As a hunter, you not only need to be thinking about hunting safety but also food safety. The outside temperature will determine the steps you need to take to assure the safety of you, your family, and your friends.

Most contamination of game is related to how the animal was wounded, dressed, handled, and/or processed. In addition, improper temperature control, preservation practices (canning and dehydrating) and cooking may also lead to a foodborne illness.

The key to safe game meat is to keep it out of the temperature danger zone 40 degrees to 140 degrees Fahrenheit as much as possible. While many people believe that cooking meat to the proper temperature can kill anything that can make you sick, this is not always the case. If the game you have killed is allowed to sit in the temperature danger zone for more than four hours, the bacteria that may have contaminated the carcass can produce a dangerous toxin. The heat of proper cooking temperatures does not destroy this toxin. To help get the deer out of the temperature danger zone quickly, field dress it as soon as possible after shooting.

This will allow for the rapid loss of body heat from the deer.

The first step in avoiding contamination of the carcass is to avoid cutting the intestine and the entrails, since this is where the bacteria, E. coli 0157:H7 and Salmonella, are found. In addition, use clean water, premoistened wipes, or alcohol swabs to frequently clean your knife between cuts to avoid dragging bacteria into the meat. If you notice an offensive smell, black blood, or blood clots in the muscle, do not consume the meat. The last step to cleaning out the cavity is to wipe the inside with a dry cloth or paper towels. If you want to rinse the cavity with water, use clean, drinkable water. Avoid the use of stream water, since it may be contaminated.

If the outside temperature is below 40 degrees Fahrenheit, you may hang the carcass outdoors, but keep it out of direct sunlight. Quite frequently, the temperature outside is above 40 degrees Fahrenheit and therefore, somewhere in the middle of the danger zone. If this is the case, rapidly chill the carcass by placing resealable plastic bags of ice or snow in the cavity and tying it shut with string. Do not place snow that may be contaminated directly into the cavity. If you do not have snow or ice available, allow for adequate air circulation in the cavity and keep the carcass out of direct sunlight. Travel back to your home, camp, or processor to get the carcass in refrigeration below 40 degrees Fahrenheit within four hours from the time you field dressed the animal.

For more detailed information, call your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office and request the booklet Proper Field Dressing and Handling of Wild Game and Fish and Proper Processing of Wild Game and Fish.

How To Can Wild Game

If the hunters in your family are planning on bagging one or more deer or other wild game, try canning the meat for a quick meal.

One of the easiest ways to preserve meat is canning strips, cubes, or chunks of meat.

The same method can be used for bear or venison. Choose quality, chilled meat. Remove any excess fat. If the meat is strong flavored, soak in a brine of one tablespoon of salt per quart, then rinse. Remove any large bones.

The hot pack method precooks the meat by roasting or browning in a small amount of fat. Fill jars with pieces of meat and add boiling broth, meat drippings, water, or tomato juice, leaving one inch of headspace. A teaspoon of salt may be added to each quart.

To raw pack, add one teaspoon salt per quart to the jar, if desired. Fill jars with raw meat pieces, leaving one-inch headspace. Do not add liquid, this method makes its own.

Process all meats in a pressure canner, pints 75 minutes and quarts 90 minutes at 10 pounds pressure in a weighted gauge pressure canner.

Mincemeat

Use venison for mincemeat instead of beef.

- 5 cups cooked ground beef (about 2 pounds)
- 1 quart ground suet
- 3 pounds raisins, mixture of dark and light
- 2 pounds dried currants
- 3 quarts chopped, peeled, cored, tart apples
- 1/2 cup finely chopped orange peel (about 1 large)
- 1 1/2 cups chopped orange pulp (about 2 large)
- 1 (8 ounce) package candied citron, chopped
- 4 1/2 cups brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon ground allspice
- 2 teaspoons ground nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground vinegar
- 1 quart sweet apple cider or white grape juice
- 1/4 cup lemon juice

Combine all ingredients in a large saucepot; simmer one hour. As mixture thickens, stir frequently to prevent sticking. Pack hot mincemeat into hot jars, leaving one-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Adjust two-piece caps. Process pints and quarts 1 hour and 30 minutes at 10 pounds in a steam-pressure canner. Yield: About 6 quarts.

Kids Korner

Pint-Sized Gifts

Rainbow-colored dinosaurs and construction paper flowers. Pictures created with crayons and glitter. When it comes to giving from the heart, children are naturals. They thrive on doing, and they love to share the results of their creativity.

Harness that energy next time you want to show appreciation to the important people in your child's life. Get them involved in creating gifts that let the givers and the receivers participate: Make some ready-made mixes.

It's so delightfully simple. Choose a tempting recipe and assemble some choice dry ingredients. Layer flour, sugar, baking powder, dried fruits, nuts and chocolate chips — whatever the recipe calls for — in gorgeous glass jars. Watch children pour themselves into creating artful patterns like sand art.

Keep in mind powdery ingredients like flour and cocoa will settle. So layer them first. Place ingredients like dried fruits, nuts or chocolate chips on top to keep them looking tempting and delicious. Have the kids tie on instructions for completing the recipe with a colorful ribbon and their gift is ready to spread cheer when your child gives it with pride — and later, when the mix fills the recipient's kitchen with the mouthwatering scent of homemade.

Start with tried-and-true mix recipes like the ones provided for cookies, snack mix and hot cocoa. Once you get a feel for the process, help your children adapt their own favorites by calculating the number of cups of dry ingredients that fit into containers they decorate.

Remember that presentation adds so much to the gift. Ask your budding artist to create colorful homemade gift tags — these will delight the recipient. And think about using charming replicas of the historic Ball® Ideal Jars. You'll find them in a variety of sizes at select retail stores.

Ready-to-go-mixes make unforgettable gifts. And getting your children involved in assembling them can teach so many of life's most important lessons: sharing, creativity, resourcefulness, friendship and generosity.

Now that's the spirit of giving!

Combine tea drink mix and orange pineapple drink mix in a small bowl. Place mixture into a pint jar. Layer red hot cinnamon candies on top of drink mix.

For Red Hot Sipper:

Measure 2 tablespoons Red Hot Sipper drink mix and place into a drinking mug. Pour 1 cup of hot water over drink mixture. Stir until well-blended and red hot cinnamon candies are melted. Makes about 16 cups of prepared drink.

Music, Food, Holiday Activities At Kitchen Kettle Village

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Kitchen Kettle Village has always remained a community of country shops. At Christmas time, with its traditional decorations and revival of old-world customs to be enjoyed by all, it offers a refreshing alternative to the frenzied pace of the mall or superstore.

On the first four Saturdays in December, the Village's 34 crafts, artisan and food shops also celebrate Holly Days — now in its eighth year. Shop owners share their own cultural heritages, shoppers can enjoy free hot mulled cider and a full roster of free concerts and activities, and children can visit with Yummie, the Village mascot. Every inch of the Village is decorated for the holidays, with Christmas trees (including one for the birds!) and reindeer, wreaths of live greens, and a life-size Nativity scene.

Each Saturday also has its own special schedule, that includes:

Saturday, Dec. 1 — The Village Belsnickel (a revival of the 18th Century Pennsylvania German Santa portrayed by Jerry Brown) will delight young and old from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Free activities include programs by the Lancaster Trombone Quartet from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. and a dance company from 1-3 p.m., and wreath-making demonstrations from noon-2 p.m. at Shreiner's Flower Shop. Throughout the day visitors can decorate leather ornaments at the Deerskin Leather Shop, see candymaking demonstrations at Pepper Lane Fudge & Sweets, while the children can decorate cookies at Yummie's Toy Box, and enjoy their own Crafts Table at the Jam & Relish Kitchen Patio — where they can make beaded candy can ornaments, a candy tree and tissue angels.

Saturday, Dec. 8 — The Village Belsnickel returns with his holiday stories from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. The roster also includes the Pequea Valley Chamber Singers from 11 a.m.-1 p.m., the Lampeter-Strasburg Madrigal Singers from 1-3 p.m., and wreath-making from noon-2 p.m. at Shreiner's Flower Shop. Throughout the day visitors can see wooden bowl painting by Cynthia Schlosser, and candymaking demonstrations at Pepper Lane Fudge & Sweets. The Children's Craft and Cookie Decorating tables will also be in full swing.

Saturday, Dec. 15 — The Warwick High School Chamber Singers and Production Company are back by popular demand from 11 a.m.-1 p.m., followed by Brass Ornaments (duo) from 1-3 p.m. Throughout the day visitors can see wooden bowl painting by Cynthia Schlosser and candymaking demonstrations at Pepper Lane Fudge & Sweets, while the kids can decorate cookies at Yummie's Toy Box.

Saturday, Dec. 22 — The Brass Ornaments will perform from 1-3 p.m., plus there will be cookie decorating for the kids, and candymaking demonstrations at Pepper Lane Fudge & Sweets.

Of course, Kitchen Kettle's Jam & Relish Kitchen will be filled with seasonal favorites that are created each day — one small batch at a time. Visitors will find over 70 jams, jellies, relishes, butters, syrups, and dressings, gift baskets of food and culinary accessories, and special holiday favorites.

Kitchen Kettle Village is located on Rt. 340 in the Village of Intercourse, 10 miles east of Lancaster. During the holiday season the Village is open 9-5 Monday through Friday, and Saturdays (Holly Days) from 9-5:30. All holiday activities and events are open to the public free of charge, and there is plenty of free parking on the Village Grounds.

Well Preserved

Marmalades

The abundance of high quality oranges, grapefruit, and lemons makes this a good time to prepare marmalade. Marmalade is a soft spread with the translucent quality and consistency of a jelly and the texture of a jam. Marmalades usually include some softened peel as well as the fruit and its juice.

Although orange marmalade is the most familiar type, marmalade can be made with a wide variety of fruits. Traditional citrus flavors include oranges, limes, kumquats, grapefruit, tangerine or a combination of citrus fruits. Temperate climate fruits like apricots, blueberries, cherries, peaches, or pears can be combined with oranges and lemons to produce a more modern flavor. The citrus brings out the flavor of the other fruits.

While marmalade makes a tasty spread on biscuits and toast, try these creative uses for marmalade in place of syrup on pancakes or French toast, in a peanut butter sandwich, as a topping on vanilla ice cream, as a glaze on poached pears, or as the filling in Danish pastry. Substituting marmalade for the sugar in the sauce in a stir fry makes a gourmet meal out of basic ingredients.

Why do some marmalade recipes use commercial pectin and others do not? The white part (or pith) of the citrus peel contains large amounts of natural pectin the gelling ingredient. When preparing a recipe without commercial pectin, leave a thin layer of the white part close to the peel to provide the needed pectin. While some of the white pith is needed, care should be taken to avoid too much because the pith causes a bitter flavor. Marmalades using commercial pectin do not require the white part.

Is there an easy way to remove the peel from the citrus fruit? Some people find that a zester, a tool that slices the colored part of the peel from the fruit, works well to remove thin even strips without taking the white pith. A swivel blade vegetable peeler also works to remove the zest. Another method is to peel the fruit and lay the peel on a cutting board and slide a sharp knife under the white portion. Cut the peel into strips about 1/8-inch wide.

How can the bitterness of the peel be reduced? Most recipes direct you to cook the peel in water one or more times. This should be a simmer rather than a rapid boil that may make the peel tough and chewy. Some recipes call for baking soda which brightens the color of the zest and helps to tenderize the peel.

Does the membrane need to be removed from the fruit? While it is not necessary, discarding the fibrous white membrane makes a clearer and less bitter marmalade.

Why doesn't marmalade set as quickly as other jellies? Marmalades made with commercial pectin continue to thicken as they cool. Most marmalades will set within 24 hours. However, some may take up to a week to set. Marmalades made without added pectin must be cooked to the gelling point which is when the hot liquid breaks from the spoon in a sheet or flake. A candy thermometer can be used to test for the gelling point which is 220 degrees Fahrenheit at 0 to 1000 feet sea level. Avoid overcooking the sugar mixture or you will end up with a fudge-like consistency instead of a spread.

How can floating fruit be avoided? Allow the marmalade to cool 5 minutes before filling jars. Gently stir the marmalade to distribute the fruit.

Can liquid pectin be substituted for powdered pectin? No, recipes are developed for each type of pectin and methods of combining ingredients differ for each. Good recipes are available from pectin manufacturers, canning books, and your local extension office.

If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. Call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd. Rm. 1 Lancaster, PA, 17601.

Look Up, Down, Under For Homestead Treasures

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent
SHREWSBURY (York Co.) —
Roosters are in. Cows are out.

Country is in. Victorian is out, or at least not quite as popular as in past years.

Rust, of all things, is in.

But all of it is there, somewhere, in the extensive inventory of beautifully-crafted merchandise tucked into the endless nooks, crannies and display areas of Homestead Country Christmas.

In this restored, century-old house on the edge of the historic town of Shrewsbury, craft lovers and collectors can literally spend hours examining rooms stocked from floor to ceiling — plus more hanging from overhead — with creativity. While some items of Victorian elegance remain popular, the tastefully-arranged country-oriented items of wood, soft fabrics, tin, and basketry are in far greater abundance than things shiny and glittery.

The fact that some of it is rusty enhances its customer popularity.

Rust-crusted items are especially trendy in the craft market right now, according to Homestead house proprietor Megan Shaub. In fact, items featuring rusty metal, like holiday ornaments and tree-topping stars, command great customer interest. They're almost as popular as the patriotic-themed items which are flying off the shelves and display areas faster than the consignors can supply restocking inventory.

"We are unique to this regional area," says Megan Shaub, who with her parents, Robert and Margaret Shaub, owns and operates The Farmer's Daughter Craft and Garden Center. A decade ago, they added the twice-yearly season craft and gifts displays in the Homestead craft house, adjoining the retail garden center.

The Homestead specializes in consigned creativity, with merchandise selected from dozens of craftsmen and artists who submit their specialties for sales consideration. Each submission of work is "juried," or selected by a management team, which determines if the work meets their standards for quality, variety and inventory need.

The Shaub family purchased this neighboring house to their farm just west of Shrewsbury in 1974, following the death of former owner Charles Fiddler. For almost 20 years, they utilized it primarily for storage space for The Farmer's Daughter Craft and Garden Center, which grew from a garden produce stand Megan began selling from as a child.

An employee of the Shaub's, Connie McKay, approached them in early 1992 about opening a craft house, an interest she had pursued earlier at her own home in North York. Plans moved quickly into a hectic few summer months crammed with getting local permits, then rewiring and remodeling the house. Meanwhile, they were also jurying potential merchandise, as well as running their farm and the garden center businesses.

"We went down to the wire," Shaub says, recalling hectic days preparing to begin accepting craft consignments by mid-September. "I wouldn't want to do it again."

By their early October opening, 11 rooms on two floors of the refurbished house were overflowing with attractive displays of craft consignments from nearly 100 artisans. Built in the shape of a cross, the house's room layout is the same on both floors, with a spacious attic overhead where excess and off-season supplies can be stored for easy access.

Customers are encouraged to "look up, look down, and look under" the displays in each area, most with somewhat of a theme. Dainty homemade scented soaps and attractive jewelry might be in one area, while rustic — and rusty — tin ornaments fill holiday trees in another. A children's area features hand-crafted games and toys, dolls, including the once-again-popular Raggedy Ann.

Consignors have become friends over the years; Shaub relates stories of them as she moves from room to room showcasing their creativity. While showing attractively-decorated, electric-switch plate covers fashioned from greeting cards, she explains with sadness that the elderly gentlemen who crafted them recently died very unexpectedly. The Homestead will continue sales of his inventory on hand.

As success of the Homestead grew, checkout lines often would often wind through the display area; creating something of a retail traffic jam. A checkout room added to the rear of the house has helped to minimize customer traffic congestion, along with adding expanded office space and some additional wall display area. Computerized registers checkout quickly while maintaining a constant inventory of items on hand.

"That enables us to quickly contact consignors for more merchandise," Shaub says. Most consignors live within a 100-mile radius, though at least one who has since relocated from the area continues to send her specialty items from Texas.

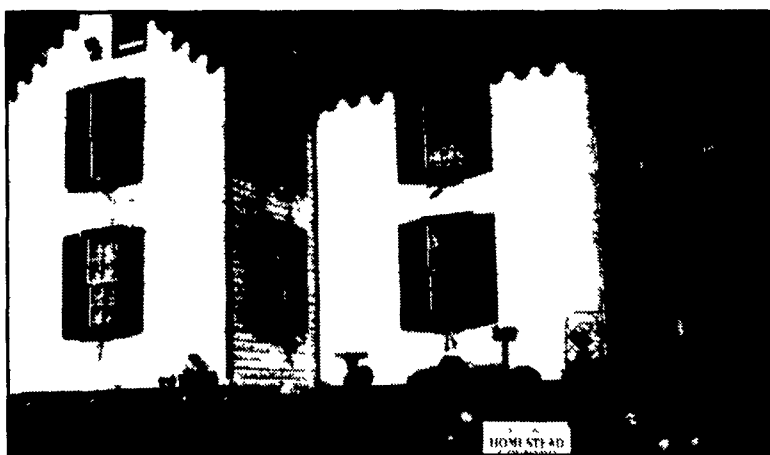

"We still have some of our original consignors," says Shaub. "They're kept busy staying up with the 'trends' in the crafts business. I attend two major shows each year and buy additional gift merchandise to complement the consignments, especially unique sorts of things."

Two managers and two assistants staff the Homestead, which is open for eight weeks prior to the Christmas holidays, and will run through Dec. 2. Spring and Easter season opens March 1 and continues through to April 14.

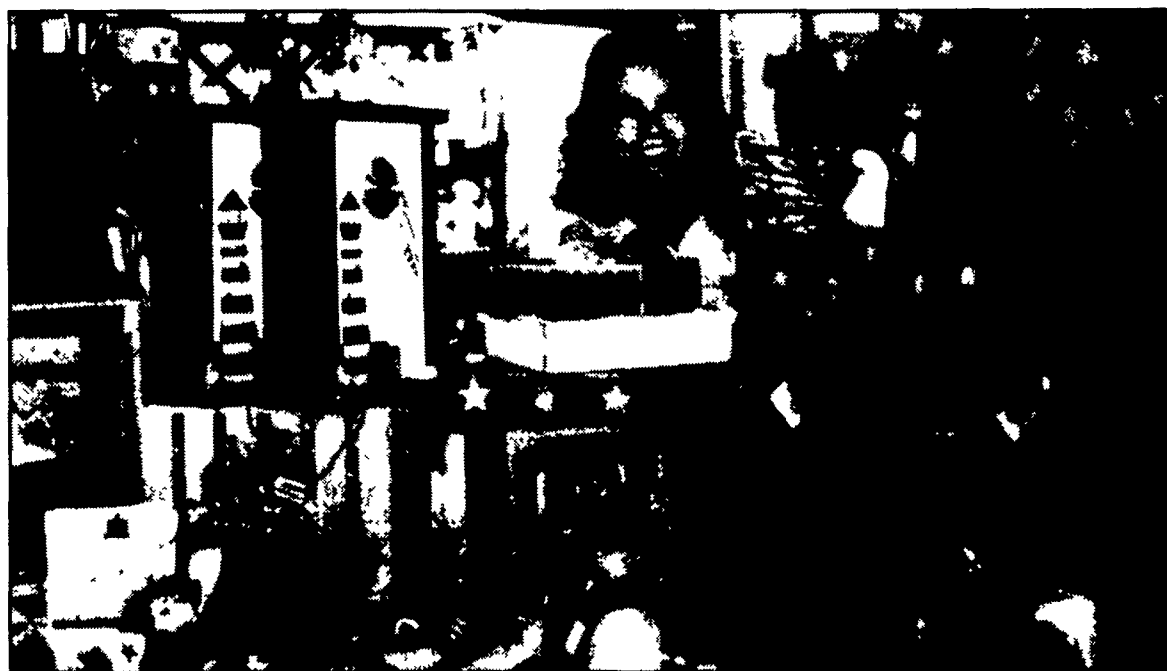

Hours are Wednesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Those interested in having merchandise inspected for approval for the spring consignment show, should request an application by writing to the Farmers Daughter, 351 W. Railroad Ave., Shrewsbury, Pa. Megan will mail a packet with jury dates and information.

Homestead Country Christmas is located on Route 851, one mile west of Interstate 83, Shrewsbury exit. For additional information on the show, contact the Farmer's Daughter Craft and Garden Center at (717) 235-1614.

Restored and modernized, the century old home on the edge of the town of Shrewsbury has every room overflowing with seasonal and holiday crafts, collectibles and unusual gift items. The craft house, open for its 10th year with Country Christmas, is unique to the area.

Especially popular this year is a section of the Homestead dedicated to patriotic items. Proprietor Megan Shaub restocks a few of the red-white-and-blue themed pieces.

Restoration of the Homestead house was planned around marketing. This closet, utilized as a niche merchandise display, still has some of the original wallpaper and old clothes hooks left on the wall.

Megan and her father Robert Shaub, are delighted with the extension they added for customer checkout. The addition, which blends nicely with the original structure, keeps long register lines moving and inventory constantly updated.

"Rust" is one of the hottest, country-style decorating trends. The Homestead's consignment inventory of holiday, rust-encrusted items ranges from tiny ornaments to this large tree-topper star.

Glass with dainty, hand-painted floral designs is available in a variety of decorative and serving pieces.

ANSWER — Carol Spangler wanted the lyrics to "Paddlin' Madeline Home." Thanks to a reader who e-mailed that the words and music on the referenced web page are attributed to Harry Woods, 1925. Website is <http://inchicken.com/songs/old/paddlein.htm>. Another reference indicates the song was sung in a 1943 movie of the same name by Cliff Edwards, otherwise known as the voice of Jimminy Cricket (Disney) and as Ukelele Ike.

ANSWER — Joyce Haak, 417 Co. Rd., Afton, N.Y. 13730, had searched unsuccessfully in countless books for the words to the poem that begins "I am a little kitten, my name is Tabby Grey, I live out in the country some 20 miles away...." Thanks to Michael Leach who e-mailed that it is possibly printed in the Shape Books series, "Playful Pals." Check out the Website www.mars.sphere.ne.jp/zokesh/zp/echubby5.html.

Ida's Notebook

since 1948.

On Dec. 1 of that year, I was awaiting the birth of our first child. She was born Dec. 5, and I was knitting a sweater for the new baby. I baked a custard and three pumpkin pies. I made scalloped potatoes and a baked ham. My husband hauled a load of our potatoes to his brother's home.

On Dec. 1, 1958, I went Christmas shopping for our four children. Also, I altered one of my old coats so that it could be worn to do barn work. Again I baked ham and squash while Allen went to the bank and a grocery store.

On Dec. 1, 1968, we had two children in college and the other four were in public school. We celebrated a birthday early as our daughter was home and had worked three days at the Ephrata Hospital. We took pictures to send as a Christmas card and packed a big lunch as four of us were going deer hunting the next day.

On Dec. 1, 1978, I washed our car, took a broken part of the grandfather's clock to Lancaster to be repaired, baked date-nut cookies for our Square Dance Group, and talked to an aunt who lived in a nursing home.

On Dec. 1, 1988, I walked all over our farm with my husband to mark which walnut trees we wanted lumbered. Went shopping and bought Christmas cards as we could not get all of our children together for a group picture. They sold a cow and decided to buy a new trailer as my husband and son had formed a partnership.

On Dec. 1, 1998, I wrote my Lancaster Farming article and sent a card to an ill relative. My husband got a thorn in his one good eye and had to see a doctor. I took old Christmas cards to an adult care center.

We went from a household of children to a household of two older people. Our life certainly isn't as busy as it was 50 years ago.

As years go by our lives and our activities change. We hope it will be for the better but we never know. As I've written a daily diary every day for almost 65 years, I thought it might be interesting to see what I wrote on Dec. 1. So, I've checked every 10 years

Sussex County Farm, Horse Show Results

AUGUSTA, N.J. — The open beef show division of the Sussex County Farm and Horse Show/New Jersey State Fair was conducted Friday, Aug. 3 through Sunday, Aug. 6.

One hundred fifteen animals went through the ring. Three others were also on display.

The first event was the obstacle course that was conducted on Friday afternoon. The Crossbreed, Shorthorn, Limousin, New Jersey Polled Hereford Show, including the junior division, Simmental, and the New Jersey Angus shows were all conducted on Saturday.

The judge for this event was John Hausner of JDH Cattle Company, Dover. He also was the judge for the showmanship and steer classes that were conducted on Sunday. The results of all these events are included.

The open beef show conducted its annual Obstacle Course on Friday, Aug. 3 at 5 p.m. in the Livestock Show Arena.

Each contestant was scored in several areas. Using a beef animal they were scored on weaving through barrels, taking an animal in and out of a blocking chute, stepping over a log, showing, typing their animal to a fence, turning in a tight space, fitting a rope halter to their animal, going through a gate, and throwing two hay bales. All the obstacles centered on activities that the exhibitor and animal might find in a day on the farm. Results follow:

Aged junior division: 1. Benny Przewozny. 2. Sam Case. 3. Brad Wagner. Intermediate division: 1. Courtney Morris. 2. Bradley Klemm. 3. Nicole Ostertag. Senior division: 1. Jen Hower. 2. Jimmy Ford. 3. Joel Geiger.

The judges for this event were Don Snook, Hampton, N.J.; Linda Hower, Bethlehem; and Gwen Wagner, Danielsville.

Big E Breeding Sheep, Sheep And Wool Promotion Show

Border Leicester Show
WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.

— Two sheep exhibitors from the state of New York walked away with four of the highest honors awarded during the Border Leicester Show at The Big E in West Springfield, Mass.

Krystine Schrom of Amenia brought home grand champion ram and reserve champion ewe, while JoAnne Tuncy of Millerton won both reserve champion ram and grand champion ewe on Saturday, Sept. 22.

Judge Phil Kin of Upper Sandusky, Ohio also awarded exhibitor's flock, get of sire and best fleece to Schrom.

Schrom and Tuncy were not the only exhibitors to excel in the show, however. The Border Leicester Show was very competitive, with animals not only from throughout New England and New York but from as far as Canada and Illinois.

Mary Grant of Woodville, Ontario brought 12 sheep with her from Canada, and consistently placed well in the show. She was rewarded for her efforts at the end of the day when she was presented with director's chairs for both premier exhibitor and premier breeder.

Suffolk Show

Northeast Suffolk sheep exhibitors competed against one another recently at The Big E. The sheep show was judged by Brad Angus, of Ottawa, Ill.

At the conclusion of the show, Huntingdon Sheldon, of Charlotte, Vt., won the grand champion ram trophy with his yearling ram, who was first named senior champion ram.

Reserve senior champion ram honors went to Wil-Hi Farm, of Tivoli, N.Y., owned by Wilson Ham and Heidi Simmons. Darlene Leary, of Oakham, Mass., won the reserve junior champion ram trophy.

In the female division, Sheldon won the grand champion ewe award, with his junior ewe lamb, who was also named junior champion ewe.

Tunis Show

Jozi Best of Litchfield, Ohio returned from her trip to Massachusetts only after capturing nearly every award given at the 2001 National Tunis Show, which was held Sept. 21 at The Big E.

Best started the day by winning first place with her yearling ram in class one of the show.

Judge Phil Kin of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, later named that ram grand champion Tunis ram.

Best's winning continued in the ewe show, as her females outshined the competition. Best was placed first in classes for senior yearling ewe, pair of yearling ewes, senior ewe lamb, and pair of ewe lambs. In addition, Kin named her senior yearling ewe as the grand champion ewe.

Best also accepted honors for exhibitor's flock, breeder's flock, get of sire, premier exhibitor flock and premier breeder.

The quality of the Best's flock was once again recognized on Tuesday, Sept. 25, when the Tunis ram was chosen as supreme champion ram for week two of The Big E. This competition included the champion rams from all 11 breeds that were exhibited during the week.

Sheep and Wool

Promotion Show

Long considered a warm, but itchy, bulky and seasonal fiber, wool is getting a new look from the people who raise the sheep that grow the wool.

A contest at The Big E is designed to promote wool and woolen fabrics by highlighting the versatility of the fiber, and features men and women, boys and girls, modeling their woolen outfits.

Leslie Lupien, 13, of Pomfret, Ct., is a veteran of the Ladies Leadline contest, which is open to both males and females. Her outstanding outfit, a sharp contrast of blacks and whites, stood out above all others, as she was named grand champion of the sheep and wool promotion competition during the second week of sheep shows at The Big E.

Leslie sewed a one-piece 100 percent black woolen pantsuit, with a black velvet bodice. Her contrasting jacket was made of white wool with a black velvet trim. She also walked through the showing with her black ewe lamb, who wore a black woolen cape with velvet trim.

Part of the show's charm is that contestants bring a sheep to the ring, to walk with them. The sheep often wears a coordinating accessory of

Spain Judges Wheat Superior

EDGEWATER, Md. — The export market for the class of wheat grown by Maryland farmers is experiencing a major surge this year, and Spain is leading the way with fast growing interest.

Maryland wheat growers produce soft red winter (SRW) wheat, a class of wheat that is used for producing a wide range of confectionery products such as cookies, crackers, and cakes. About 40 percent of the SRW wheat grown in the U.S. is exported yearly, but global export sales of soft red winter wheat this year are running nearly 25 percent more than the same time last year. Current sales are 3.4 million metric tons, compared to 2.6 million metric tons at the same time last year.

For the first time in about 20 years, buyers in Europe have started buying SRW. Spain is leading the way, purchasing 310,600 metric tons already this year. Recently, U.S. Wheat Associates (USW), the industry's export market development organization, held a series of crop quality seminars with some of the Spanish mills and asked the millers what they thought of the wheat.

"We are pleased to report that several of the mills judge the SRW to be superior to the British 'biscuit wheat' that they've been using for years," said Vince Peterson, USW vice president in Europe. In an extraordinary turnaround, Peterson explains, one of the primary Spanish mills is now using 50 percent U.S. wheat.

European buyers and millers, like their colleagues around the world, attend USW seminars to learn about supply and demand, prices, and quality information on this year's wheat crop. In Europe this year, USW experts provided separate quality criteria for East Coast SRW, differentiating it from the soft red winter wheat that is grown in the nation's midsection and transported out of the Gulf of Mexico.

USW will be providing the East Coast SRW information to approximately 500 buyers, millers, and bakers in 14 European countries during November. For years, the U.S. wheat organizations have been pursuing European market access by seeking changes in EU ag policy. Finally, this season, import duties for SRW have been essentially zero.

"We are doing everything we can to promote U.S. wheat in this new market environment with near-open access," Peterson said. "The U.S. has now sold some 15 million bushels of SRW to the EU, and the potential for additional sales is set."

Betty Beach Fills Home With Dolls

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — When ill health forced Betty Beach to quit her waitressing job, she didn't want to sit down and watch "the soaps."

"I wanted something to do with my mind," she said. "I have always loved dolls and found an ad for a doll repair course."

In order to complete the course, she needed dolls, and haunted yard sales and flea markets for sick dolls. "The worse the condition of the doll, the greater the challenge," she said.

Most of those dolls are now on display in her home sporting new hairdos and fashionable clothes all made by Betty.

"I like both old and new dolls," Betty says. "The value is not so important to me as the way they look."

She especially enjoys little girl type dolls.

"Madam Alexander is the oldest doll company in the United States," Betty explains. "Their dolls are expensive but of top quality."

She produces a miniature version and notes the dimpled hands, cheek dimples, finger joints, and other features. Betty said, "They pay attention to detail."

Other brands she recommends collecting for their value are Robert Tonner, Boyds Dolls, Avon, Susan Weaken, Seymour Mand, and Marie Osmand.

"All of these designers make lovely dolls in different varieties," Betty explains. "You can buy very pretty dolls for less money, but they probably won't increase in value as quickly."

Betty admits most of her real bargains came from flea markets or as gifts. "My step-son and his wife were going to church one morning when they noticed a box full of dolls at a yard sale. Because they were in a hurry, they could not stop to pick them up. As soon as church was over they made a beeline for the sale and were ecstatic to find the dolls were giveaways."

Today, most of them proudly adorn special places of honor in the Beach home.

Collecting dolls quickly leads to collecting other types of toys. Betty found a metal dollhouse made shortly after the war. A dollhouse of this type with the original furniture would now be worth $2,500.

While she has a number of collectible Barbies, most of her Barbie family likewise came from yard sales. Sporting "Beach fashions," the dolls are posed in various activities throughout the house.

"I change my dolls with the seasons," Betty says. "But, I keep most of them out all of the time."

Betty Beach Fills Her Home With Dolls

It is better to keep a doll out then packed away in an airtight box, drawer, or bag. It is much better to clean them once in a while then to not give them air."

Upon entering the Beach home, one's eye is drawn to a set of western dolls seemingly enjoying a country evening and arranged on the dining room table. There are Jack and Jill, Hansel and Gretel, and Raggedy Ann and Andy dolls.

Princess Diana smiles from a position of regality, and historically and elegantly dressed little girls adorn the living room.

"When I am having a bad day, I just come in this room, sit down and enjoy all of these smiles," Betty said.

Her husband, Kenny, enjoys them as much as she does often adding to her collection. "When we travel we are always on the lookout for dolls," Betty said.

From a doll-sized cradle, Betty produces an Indian baby so real, one immediately wants to cuddle it. "That was handmade by the Indians in South Dakota," Betty said.

Kenny so much enjoys the dolls he has started his own "boy" doll collection. Also a collector, he enjoys farm toys and John Deere artwork.

Betty's sewing room is a testimony to her skills at doll repair and dressing. Two of the dolls are being carefully fitted for wedding gowns.

"I often make dresses to mimic the original bridal gown of the bride," Betty said. "The bride likes to keep these for her children. Or, it might even be a grandmother who wants her grandchildren to see what their mother looked like as a bride."

Betty never wants for customers although she only advertises by word of mouth.

Once you have toured the doll mecca including the living and dining areas, bedrooms, basement rooms, and den, Betty and Ken have yet another surprise. They turned their sun porch into a bear den and have started a collection of teddy bears.

A room off of the patio is also filled with dolls. One of Kenny's favorites is "Giggles," a doll made in the mid '60's. The doll has full dimpled cheeks and a perky smile. Her eyes roll as she claps her hands, and she, of course, giggles.

Betty frequently does doll shows for organizations or church events. "If there are men in the audience, they always like "Giggles."

"I found her at a yard sale in Florida for 50 cents," Betty says. Even in bad shape, she is probably worth $15.

The best way to find out the true value of a doll is to get a copy of Doll World, which will evaluate any doll.

Dolls are not the only talent this lady displays. After retirement, she took up painting and particularly enjoys doing country scenes on metal such as saw blades.

One of her works was displayed at the Smithsonian, which earned her a certificate that proudly hangs on the kitchen wall.

"It's never been a desire of mine to sit down

THE ANTIQUE DETECTIVE

Anne Gilbert

Firefighting Collectibles Are "Hot"

Maybe it was yet another show of support for the valiant firefighters at ground zero that had paddles waving at the Skinner Firefighting Memorabilia auction, November 10.

Whatever it was, it also proved that the auction market is alive and well. Granted firefighting items have long been popular with collectors. But, for the most part sales were well over estimate. A half-plate Daguerreotype of three members of The Union No.2 Fire Company in parade dress, c.1850 sold for $9,200. Prints with firefighting subjects did well.

A chromolithograph, c.1876

Centennial Exhibition Philadelphia of firemen rushing to the fire sold above the $100-$200 estimate for $862. A helmet, belt and dress cap, c. 1847 sold over the $500-$600 estimate for $1,265. There were many early 19th century leather fire buckets with painted motifs that sold over estimate. One with the owner's name, c.1840 fetched $805.

This category covers a lot of territory from postcards to sheet music. Indeed, a complete section of leather riveted hose with couplings that was estimated at $400-$600 sold for $2,300. However, if that seems a bit outrageous, you are wrong.

The riveted, leather hose was the first type used, patented in 1817. By the late 19th century new, improved types were used. Today it is a collectible rarity.

The history of America's firefighters is long and colorful. The earliest items available to collectors date from the early 19th century. It was those fire-fighting methods that have left us our most interesting and valuable collectibles. Consider the leather buckets used to carry water from nearby water sources to the fires. That's where the phrase "the bucket brigade" began. The buckets were painted and gilded with bright colors and patriotic symbols. They identified the Fire Company names. Those with just the number of the firehouse go for a few hundred dollars.

No less ornate were the firemen's helmets. They were fancifully decorated with metal trim.

Metal fire marks from the 19th century have been collected since the 1950s. Originally, they were mounted on buildings to show that the buildings were covered by fire insurance.

Each insurance company had its own design. They were made of tin, brass, lead, cast iron, aluminum and zinc. Still modestly priced, examples sold at the Skinner auction for a few hundred dollars. Most costly are sheet-copper fire marks.

CLUES: Many of the early fire fighting items have been reproduced. Most common are the firemark reproductions, made since the early 20th century. Research and looking for patent dates are some help. Also reproduced in the 1950s are the buckets. They can be recognized by flat, leather strip handles. The originals were rolled and sewn.

To begin a collection, think "small." Most affordable are items in dealers' cases and in the miscellaneous boxes at garage sales. For example you might concentrate on designs that symbolize fire fighting, rather than the object itself. You might find a metal ashtray or even a cigar box depicting fire fighting. Truly inexpensive would be a paper-weight with a photo of a firefighter encased. Other possibilities could be photos, stereo cards and tintypes. Old chewing tobacco tins are flea market and garage sale possibilities and can have firefighter art.

Certificates can turn up anywhere and their artwork makes them highly collectible. For instance, those issued in the late 19th century often had a chromolithograph of a piece of firefighting equipment. Even at auction they sell for a few hundred dollars.

You can bet that New York firefighting equipment used on September 11, and photographs and newspapers of that day are being collected for the future.

Antiques Questions And Answers

I have a sword found in my grandfathers house, originally built in 1774 in Turtle Creek, Pa. The sword has a 32-inch blade with the name "Shannon Miller-Crane" etched on the blade, in a semi-circle. On the outside edge of the cross guard are 13 stars capped by an eagle. It has the initials "G.W.". Could it have belonged to George Washington? The family of the original owners of the home claimed George Washington was a friend and occasional guest.

J.A. - Pittsburgh, PA

Since it requires a specialist who has historical access to makers of edged weapons in 18th century America, I suggest you send all information to Mr. Selby Kiefer, Military Weapons Expert, Sotheby's 1334 York Ave., New York, NY 10021. Send a good, clear photo and family history. If authentic it belongs in a museum. Mr. Kiefer can advise you.

I bought this "Ideal Revlon" doll in 1956 for my daughter. She has all the original clothes and box marked "Queen of Diamonds 09902." On the back of her head is "V.T.22". She has rooted blonde hair and blue sleep eyes. What is a current value?

M.T. - Apollo, PA

She could sell in a shop for $175-250.

What was the purpose of this piece of pine furniture with lift top lid, small drawer one the left side, on top of a low cupboard with a wide door?

M.P. - Boynton Beach, FL

From your photo you have an early 19th century, dough trough, mounted on a cupboard. It could sell at auction for $1,200 or more.

What is the age and value of this corner desk with veneer trim on the drawer? Inside the drawer is stamped, S Springfield Furniture Works, Inc. In 1982 I was offered $400 for it.

G.B. - Denver, IA

While I suspect it was made in the early 20th century the overall look is of the American Federal Period. 1788-1825. How it is constructed is a clue to age. For instance a Federal piece would be rough finish underneath. Get a hands-on evaluation from a professional appraiser. The difference could be several thousand dollars.

Your column about early English pottery made me wonder if my identical roosters are valuable. How would I find out about them and other old things I have?

M.A.G. - South Plainfield, NJ
cf102 You could begin by taking photos and showing them at antique shows or you can look in the Yellow pages under Appraisers, personal property.

What do you think this gas stove, in working condition, made around 1927 is worth? It was made by the Cleveland Stove Company.

R.L. - N. Apollo, PA

A whole new generation is decorating with these stoves, especially when they are redoing the 1920s, 30s bungalows.

A shop could price it at $1,200 or more.

Does this painting of pink flamingos in a tropical setting have any value? I remember seeing one like it in a magazine some time ago.

P.F. - Staten Island, NY

In the 1940s, 50s flamingos were a popular subject from paintings to cheap yard sculptures, brought back by Florida tourists. Interest was revived along with collecting everything 40s/50s a decade ago. What you have is a print that could sell for $150-250 in a shop.

I have a Battenburg lace table cloth, 65 inches in diameter handed down in the family. What could it be worth?

B.B.M. - Lincoln, NE
(For Vinton, IO)

In good condition your 19th century Battenburg cloth could sell in a shop for around $400.

My church, St. James Episcopal of Mooresville possesses a number of items dating from the 1800s. Among them two Windsor chairs belonging to our founding family from the 1790s. Supposedly they were given to the church when built in 1856. Any information will be appreciated.

M.S.(Parish historian) - Mooresville, NC

Your "fan back" Windsor chairs could be probably made in the 1820s. Over the years there have been many variations with many names. The more spindles the better the quality of chair. It was the custom to use a variety of woods in a single chair. The hoop or bow of the back was hickory, spindles from hickory or ash; legs from oak, hickory or maple; seats from pine, white-wood or beech. To hide the varied woods the chairs were painted. Your country-style Windsors could sell at auction for $350 or more each.

Can you help identify this gilt metal object that appears to be some type of container? The sides

Illustrated Lecture Researches The Martin Story — From Switzerland To Weaverland

HINKLETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Darwin and Raymond Martin, coordinators of the Martin Family History and Genealogy Project will report their latest research findings on the early history of the pioneer Mennonite Martins who settled in the Wea-verland Valley in the early 1700s. The seminar, sponsored by the Swiss Pioneer Preservation Associates, will take place Friday, Dec. 7, at 7 p.m. at the Christian Aid Ministries Center, Route 322 between Hinkletown and Blue Ball.

The researchers show possible documentation of the 1669 baptism of patriarch Christian Martin and the names of his parents. They will analyze reasons for their migration to Germany and later to America. A slide show of early Martin farms, houses, and tombstones in the New World will be featured. They will report on the farms and colonial agricultural practices of the immigrants as well as the identity and fate of two Martins who got in big trouble for feeding an escaped British soldier during the Revolutionary War.

Also displayed at the meeting will be several colonial coins found at the early Martin home sites in the Weaverland Valley.

Admission is free. A free-will offering will be taken to benefit the Swiss Pioneer Preservation Association as they work to preserve the local landmarks.

For more information, contact Raymond Zimmerman at (717) 354-4301 or (717) 354-7139.

Colonial coins found at Martin Homestead, Weaverland Valley, will be displayed during the seminar sponsored by Swiss Pioneer Preservation Associates.

are hollow and the entire piece is very elaborate with raised scrolls and leaves and a cherub bust against a shell. My mother purchased it in Spain over 50 years ago. It has no marks.

P.J. - Charlotte, NC

From your description you have a mid 19th century, rococo-style letter rack that could have been made in Spain or France. Similar objects sell for around $350 and up at auction.

Can you give me a value and information on my antique chamberpot? It has gilt trim and bird, butterfly and floral motifs. I have drawn the marks on the bottom; C & W, Raku, and numbers and letters within a diamond Beautiful pastel blue band at the top.

V.A.W. - Macksville, NC

The value of 19th century china chamberpots depends on age, quality of design and maker. The word "Raku" is the name of the pattern. The diamond marks are date letters. Yours dates 1881. I was unable to find the makers name in the two reference books on pottery and porcelain makers marks. However, it was made by one of the many English potters working at the time. It is a beautiful piece and could sell in a shop for $400.

I'm hoping you can help identify a portrait of Anne W. Waln (Rawle) an oil on canvas. It is signed Thomas Sully, who was a well known English-American painter (1783-1872). How can I find the value?

A.B.C. - Charlotte, NC

If indeed your portrait is authentic you need an expert to look at it. Begin by taking a good photo and measurements, detailing where it is signed. Send the photo to Ms. Colleen Fesko, American Paintings Expert, Skinner Galleries, 357 Main St., Bolton, MA 01740 and request an estimated auction value.

combined with excellent silage quality on an IVTD basis.
(Available in Roundup Ready for 2002.)

HT7712
is the benchmark for eastern silage production in 112-day maturity. Consistently delivers high tonnage combined

HYTEST.®

Dairy cows prefer "Hybrids Built to Feed" from HYTEST® Seeds. Delivering high yields, more energy and consistent higher whole plant digestibility utilizing In Vitro True Digestibility (IVTD) technology, feeding HYTEST hybrids has shown increased milk production in dairy herds. For your one seed source offering top performing, high quality forage and row crop products, contact your local HYTEST Dealer or call us.

EARTHMETAL DISK BLADES

THE EARTHMETAL ADVANTAGE
What makes Earth Metal so tough?

The exclusive steel formula makes Earth Metal disc blades up to 60% tougher than ordinary rolled steel blades. And they wear up to 20% longer than the best conventional blades and up to 60% longer than many low quality imported blades. That means you save money by reblading less often. And less breakage means you save on downtime, too. Because the internal grain structure of Earth Metal blades is non-directional, they have equal strength in all directions. The use of special additives in Earth Metal keeps sulfide inclusions on globular form, virtually eliminating directional failures. For several years now Case IH dealers have been telling their customers that Earth Metal is the very finest material for disc blades. And today that's just as true as ever. Actually, the only thing better than Earth Metal is thicker Earth Metal - and that's exactly what we're offering you. Test after test has shown that - size for size - Case IH Earth Metal disc blades average 11% thicker than most blades offered in the marketplace. So besides getting the toughest blades around, you get more of it.

Mr. Planter Owner:

Thank you for taking a minute to consider this offer.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. is offering our annual off-season inspection and evaluation of your planter for the purpose of identifying worn, broken, or malfunctioning parts. Many times, seemingly insignificant wear will affect the accuracy of your planter more than you realize. If nothing else, it may be time to have your finger pick-up meters checked on our test stand. Also, new innovations, attachments and options are constantly being introduced which may be of interest to you for installation on your planter.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. parts and service personnel are specifically trained and informed planter specialists, ready to examine your planter with you! If you determine that the planting proficiency of your planter could be improved with our service, we would be happy to provide that service for you. A technician will return to your farm with one of our well-stocked service trucks at a later date to assist you in doing the work. We encourage you to be part of the actual servicing so that any pointers or insight, which the technician may have for you with regard to planter operation, could be conveyed at that time.

What does it cost?

If you set up an appointment for a planter evaluation, you will be charged a flat fee:

4 or 6 row planter	$175.00
8 row planter	$200.00
12 or 16 row planter	$225.00

(Customers over 50 mile radius of Lititz, subject to mileage charge)

At time of inspection we will recommend to you any item needing attention, also at that time we will remove your seed meters to take in for testing if you so desire.

Your cost of meter testing is $23.95. This includes testing, cleaning, & repair labor (parts not included).

If you have any questions, please contact the service department at 717-626-4705 or 800-414-4705.

Thank you.

REAR BLADES (10 HP to 65 HP)

SERVIS-RHINO®... THE REAR BLADE LEADER has a rugged rear blade ready to work for you on 20 HP to 65 HP tractors. Additionally, you have the assurance that each Rhino® rear blade is designed and built based on over 50 years of blade building experience to make you the most productive and offer you the best value.

Model R500 - 7 Foot

TW120

The TW120 cuts a 120" swath of material. The center gearbox, rated at 120 HP, transfers power to the 100 HP outboard gearboxes. Torque dampeners on both sides of the center gearbox help prevent driveline and gearbox damage caused from sudden shockloads. Massive 2-3/8" diameter output shafts in the outboard gearboxes help provide optimum service. The pull-type and semi-mount units require a 50 HP (min) tractor and the lift-type unit requires a 60 HP (min) tractor (with adequate front weights).

TW120 - 10' Cut • TW84 - 7' Cut • TW72 - 6' Cut

Pull-Type

The pull-type SE10 requires only a 45 HP (min) tractor for economical, wide-cut mowing. A hydraulic cylinder or ratchet lift screw is available for raising and lowering the mower. A spring shock absorber is optional to help cushion shockloads to the mainframe when operating in rough terrain. (Unit shown with optional chain guards. Deflectors are standard.)

Just arrived in time for wintertime fence line trimming with 21' reach!
THEY REALLY WORK!

Purchase a tractor & mower and reclaim your wide fence rows today! Ask about financing.

Servis® 1948 Hydraulic Boom Flail Cutters are designed for mowing grass and cutting brush in hard-to-reach areas including roadsides, ditchbanks, ponds, and fence rows. Large model with up to 18'8" horizontal reach and up to 4" diameter brush cutting.

Servis® Boom Mowers...
Providing the Best
In Quality and Versatility

The Servis® 2160 Hydraulic Boom Rotary Cutter from Servis-Rhino® is designed for agricultural applications including cutting grass, weeds, and material up to 2" in diameter on an intermittent basis.

With a maximum vertical reach of 22'6" and 190 degrees of head movement, the 2160 is ideal for trimming back brush up to 2" in diameter along fence rows or edges of open fields and other hard-to-reach areas. The design of the boom arm allows the 2160 to mow on the opposite side of low profile fences for easier fence row cleanup.

Narrow Transport Width. The 2160 can be folded into a transport width of 113" for easier travel on roads and through gates. Replaceable, full-length skid shoes are standard to help prevent wear to the deck mainframe. The 3/16" pan blade carrier is reinforced with a 3/4" steel plate in the bottom of the pan for added strength and momentum. The deck side skirts are 1/4" x 9-1/4" to handle large volumes of material. Front and rear rubber safety deflectors are standard equipment.

DB150. Over 30 years of hydraulic mower design experience has made the Rhino® DB150 the preferred choice of experienced operators for the mowing of pond banks, levees, drainage ditches, and hard-to-reach areas.

The DB150 can extend to a maximum of 158" from the center line of the tractor allowing the 60 inch rotary head to cut areas that are difficult or impossible to reach with ordinary mowers. By being hydraulically driven, maintenance is greatly reduced with the absence of belts and pulleys. The DB150 outperforms many competitive units with smaller hydraulic systems. The DB150 utilizes a 60 gallon hydraulic system which allows the unit to run cooler in tough mowing conditions. The large reservoir also serves as a counterweight and remains stationary on the mainframe, eliminating the potential traffic hazard of a movable counter-balance weight. The DB150 features a heavy-duty three-point hitch using a lower double lug hitch system to fit a wide range of tractors. To help insure a clean cut, the DB150 features updraft blades and a blade tip speed of 20,028 FPM.

We have had our best sales year ever! We made several multiple unit deals with our big customers and as a result, our used equipment inventories are stocked with many good items traded from our local farms. This fall we also bought 11 Case-IH Magnums coming off 3-year leases. These Magnums are very clean and in perfect operating condition.

All our equipment is priced to sell and with the interest rates the lowest they've been in 40 years, now is the best time to invest in dependable equipment. Don't miss this opportunity to get the best deal you are ever going to make. Call a Hooper salesman today!

Valent U.S.A. Corporation Names New President

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — Valent U.S.A. recently announced that Masayo Tada will return to Valent to lead the company. Tada replaces Mike Borel, who has served as president of Valent since 1998.

Tada was formerly an officer of Valent having served as vice president of marketing and planning from 1988 - 1992. He returns to Valent from its parent company, Sumitomo Chemical Company, Ltd. a company that develops and markets products to protect crops, improve food quality, beautify the environment and safeguard public health. A member of the Sumitomo Chemical Board of Directors, Tada was responsible for the Plant Protection Division.

"Valent is committed to its crop protection business and customers with the support of Sumitomo," explains Tada. "The United States will continue to be a key strategic market in the global business strategy of Sumitomo, with Valent as the core of our U.S. business structure."

Sumitomo Chemical will continue to seek strategic alliance and acquisition opportunities with third-party partners to bring further value to customers in its global crop protection business.

CSI Creates Spreadsheet For Crop Storage Cost Comparison

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Crop Storage Institute (CSI) has created a spreadsheet to find the long term costs of ownership for tower silos, bunker silos, and silage bags.

The easy to use Microsoft Excel spreadsheet takes all costs of ownership into consideration. This includes initial costs, costs of operating tractors, depreciation costs of implements used, costs of unloading each unit, cost of spoiled forage, as well as interest costs. The inputs can be modified to help each producer analyze each situation individually. The program then has outputs that break costs into major categories to aid in comparison.

This cost comparison has been reviewed and found very helpful by consultants, university faculty, and numerous producers. It can provide a valuable analysis of the costs in a process that rarely broken down piece by piece.

The Crop Storage Institute is an organization that seeks out information from universities throughout the country and subsequently organizes that information in an easy to understand and compact format. It is our goal to help livestock producers make more informed decisions.

For a limited time, this program is available free of charge to interested parties. Requests can be sent via e-mail to cropstorage@cs.com or call (630) 258-7206.

Yetter Introduces Money-Saving Strip-Till Innovation

COLCHESTER, Ill. — Strip-tilling can now be more cost efficient with the Yetter Generation II Maverick Opener 2984 Series from Yetter Manufacturing Company. This improved adaptation of Yetter's original Maverick Opener allows farmers to maximize yield potential, plant earlier, minimize equipment wear and tear, lower operating costs and build healthier soil.

"We are promoting the Generation II Maverick Opener as the farmer's Return On Investment Champion, because of its money-saving benefits," said Susan Wherley of Yetter's Marketing Department. It offers an excellent return on the farmer's investment, so the initial cost can be quickly recouped."

Like its predecessor, the Yetter Generation II Maverick Opener maximizes yield potential by turning fertilizer dollars into higher yields. Fertilizer placed in the root zone where crops need it most, all season long.

This improved version of the original Maverick Opener also offers other features that farmers want. For example, the Generation II Maverick Opener is designed to allow more transport clearance and to accommodate a bigger blade, which is mounted between two coulters for added strength. The knife is protected by the blade in stony conditions.

Yetter even offers several optional features for added versatility: a soil disruption guard that controls depth and keeps the blade running clean, a quick-adjust-to-float feature on the optional residue manager, a V-closing wheel for special applications, smooth and notched sealing discs, and sealing wheels.

In addition to maximizing yield potential, the Generation II Maverick Opener provides other benefits, as well. Farmers will like the fact that they can plant earlier when using this innovative strip-till machine. The opener's coulter and residue manager combination, along with the knife's tillage action, promotes mellow soil for early warm-up, while the sealing discs build a perfect berm, or strip, right in the planting zone. By performing four jobs in one pass (tillage, residue management, fertilizer placement and sealing) the Yetter Generation II Maverick Opener also saves time, and minimizes equipment wear and tear on a variety of tillage equipment.

Syngenta Crop Protection Launches New FarmAssist® Software

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Syngenta Crop Protection has released its "FarmAssist" 6.0 crop management software program to accompany the recently launched FarmAssist.com Website. The new free software helps farmers track the cost of chemical and fertilizer applications, weather observations, irrigation use, disease information, leaf and soil analysis, and yield projections.

FarmAssist.com provides growers with access to a broad range of agricultural resources and crop production information. This innovative tool allows growers to quickly obtain facts and figures about agricultural issues that directly impact the success of their business.

FarmAssist 6.0 greatly expands on 5.0's functionality. The new version has all of FarmAssist's standard features, plus contact and calendar functionality, more detailed farm operations record keeping, and comprehensive reporting. FarmAssist 6.0 allows growers to track virtually every aspect of their farming operation. Seed variety and tolerance, as well as fertilizer and pesticide costs and rates are recorded on a field-by-field basis. In addition, the software maintains permit, storage and equipment information.

"Accurate farm record keeping has become increasingly important as regulators and food companies ask growers for more accurate reporting, and as growers seek to maintain profitable production in a challenging farm economy," said Warren Boerger, head of e-business at Syngenta.

Items featured on FarmAssist.com include frequently updated market news, cash grain bids, commodity price information, pest alerts, agronomic information, Syngenta product updates and more.

Growers can also access the "FarmAssist Resource" site, an electronic library containing up-to-date agricultural information such as pest identification, reference and treatment information; product recommendations; product labels and MSDS forms; and government forms and templates.

Land Pride Introduces 48-Inch Grooming Mower

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride has recently introduced the FDR2548 rear discharge grooming mower. This mower offers a 48-inch deck, which is the smallest deck available in Land Pride's mower line, but with the features of Land Pride's popular 25 Series.

The FDR25 Series provides a clean cut with widespread even dispersal of clippings and is also available in 60 inch, 72 inch and 84 inch cutting widths.

The rear discharge feature allows for cleaner mowing as clippings are evenly discharged close behind the mower avoiding streets, sidewalks and landscaping. The FDR25 Series also features a floating three-point system to allow for excellent ground following capabilities, adjustable lower hitch points, four non-aligned gauge wheels with front roller option, 3/16 inch deck thickness, and heavy duty hubs, spindles, gearbox and blades.

N.Y. Farmers And Growers Take Part In Ag Roundtable At Geneva

GENEVA, N.Y. — New York Assemblyman William 'Bill' Magee (D-111th) recently conducted a roundtable discussion on "The Viability of NY State Agriculture" at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in Geneva. This was the second of three roundtables the chairman of the NYS Assembly's ag committee has scheduled around the state.

Among the invited guests were farmers and growers as well as major players in the ag community, including representatives from NY's Department of Ag & Markets, the Wine & Grape Foundation, NOFA NY, the NY Farm Bureau, NYS Apple Association, NYS Vegetable Growers, FarmNet, NYS Hort Society, NYS Farmers' Market Federation, the NY Christmas Tree Farmers, Cornell University, the Farm Credit and other lending agencies, SUNY Morrisville, and Cornell Cooperative Extension.

Magee challenged the assembled group of 35 to spend the first hour identifying the problems facing agriculture in the state and the second hour talking about solutions and what the state could do to help. "New York City restaurant chefs tell me 80 percent of their clientele want New York products, but the chefs can't get them," said Magee. "I know opportunities are there for New York farmers. The question is, how can we capitalize on them."

The events of Sept. 11 were a sobering note to many comments made during the session. The 2001 budget has not been finalized in Albany-and many in the group felt strongly it should still be a priority-but the consequences of the Sept. 11 attack on New York's current budget and the 2002-2003 budget could only be surmised. Many voiced concern that it was going to be critical for agriculture to "echo a strong unified voice about the importance of the ag components in the state budget" and

"pick priorities" in what was characterized as "this whole new world."

Jim Trezise, president of the NY Wine & Grape Foundation, announced his organization's celebration of "New York Cuisine," efforts to raise visibility of New York products by pairing wine from 35 New York wineries with 20 restaurants and 12 retail stores in New York City.

"It's time to buy New York," said Trezise. "We can build New York by buying New York products and services, and supporting the jobs of New Yorkers." He was the first to identify two problems that were mentioned throughout the meeting: the lack of brand identity for New York agricultural products, and the lack of a really good transportation network to get the state's foods and wines to important markets, particularly those in New York City.

Jim Allen, president of the New York State Apple Association, seconded Trezise's complaints. "New York is not the #1 apple in The Big Apple," said Allen. He cited the high cost of doing business in NYC, but felt "the time was right" to go after market opportunities in New York City.

Another issue cited several times was the loss of profitability felt by many New York state farmers. Many in attendance perceived its cause not "free" trade but "fair" trade. Some voiced concerns about competition from growers in Canada and Mexico, who out-compete New York farmers on price in "everything from tomatoes and cucumbers to Christmas trees." George Lamont, president of the NYS Hort Society, said, "We want free and equal access to markets. New York farmers cannot import apples into Canada. Access to markets should be reciprocated."

One important factor affecting profitability is crop devastation caused by wildlife. Complaints focused on one species and one species only: deer.

"The economic damage to the apple industry in the Hudson Valley because of deer is over $2M/year," said Lamont. He would like to see the state institute a fencing program where the growers would erect high-tensile deer fences around their orchards and the state would pay for the materials. Similar programs already exist for a Graze NY program available to New York's sheep and goat farmers.

Zoning was another big issue. More local zoning boards need to recognize the "right to farm." They also need to recognize the need for small- and trailer-type housing for migrant labor in agricultural communities. It was reported that some towns are pursuing restrictions on intensive livestock operations.

Kathryn Boor, associate professor of Food Science at Cornell, was the sole voice at the roundtable representing New York's agricultural food processors. Speaking on behalf of the New York cheese manufacturers, she warned that processors were threatening to leave the state because they were anticipating a 60 to 80 million pounds of milk/month shortfall for cheese production. "These processors need a guaranteed supply," she said. There are 7,000 dairies in New York, but the number continues to shrink and few people, even if they do have the ambition, can afford the initial capital investment to put on the dairy cows and build the sophisticated milking parlors.

"If farming is profitable, there will be farmers in New York," said Laura Pedersen, who was representing the NYS Vegetable Growers. "Some of the issues facing processors are the same issues that face agricultural producers." She cited the price of power, the cost of labor and high taxes as three drawbacks to doing business in New York.

Lee Hudson, a commercial egg farmer, also complained about New York's seemingly endless paperwork—"miles and miles of it, often from competing state agencies"—and there was vigorous head-nodding around the room.

Magee was praised by many speakers for his ongoing support for agriculture. And he was optimistic about the visibility of agriculture in the legislature. "In the last two years, more and more representatives understand that they are talking about agriculture when they talk about upstate New York." He said more farmers should become "conservation-minded" to take advantage of the public's "great passion to preserve open spaces."

Magee said he had met with both New York senators about including more money for New York farmers in the federal US Farm Bill. He also noted that he had tried to introduce legislation requiring "country of origin" labeling, but "supermarkets resisted it." He has introduced legislation to create AgriDevelopment Zones, much like Empire Development Zones, that will aid in economic development.

Raymond Cross, president of SUNY-Morrisville, addressed the issue of ag education and some of the programs his institution might institute to bring more young people into production agriculture. He also talked about their research into 'energy co-generation' that might power greenhouses, thereby allowing New York farmers to grow more vegetables in the winter. This project addresses the year-round supply issue that prevents large distributors from buying New York state products.

Ric Zimmerman, deputy commissioner of the NYS Dept. of Ag & Markets, noted that the state had programs that addressed some of problems, but agreed more could be done, particularly to enhance the distribution infrastructure.

Programs mentioned included Come Farm in NY, the Pride of NY, Grow NY, the Farmers' Market Grants program, the Farmland Viability Grants program, and programs that help farmers work with Farm Credit.

Zimmerman strongly suggested that more farmers get on local town boards to affect regulations that might impact the future of agriculture in their home communities.

Farmer Educators To Advance Sustainability

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Three farmers have been chosen by the Northeast Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) program to serve as sustainable farmer educators for 2002. The three will attend meetings, conferences and field days, talk to individual farmers, answer questions, make referrals and generally support the region's farmers as they move toward agriculture that is profitable, environmentally sound and beneficial to communities.

Steve Groff, of Cedar Meadow Farm in Holtwood, will focus on horticultural crops. Groff is a third-generation farmer and an advocate of soil health, soil conservation and cover cropping. In 1999, he was named the national No-Till Farmer Innovator of the Year by No-Till Farmer magazine; in 2001, he received the Sustainable Agriculture Leadership Award from the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture. Groff can be reached at sgroff@expix.net or by calling (717) 284-5967.

Elizabeth Henderson, of Peacework Organic Farm in Newark, N.Y., will also focus on horticultural crops. Henderson has farmed for 21 years and has experience presenting workshops on a range of topics, including organic production, marketing and startup farming. She has helped found and sustain organizations that reach out to the farm community. She says, "Having received my agricultural education from other farmers and gardeners, I feel an obligation to pass on what I have learned." Henderson can be reached at ehendrsn@red-suspenders.com or by calling (315) 331-9029.

Lawrence Shearer, of Colrain Dairy Farm in Colrain, Mass., will focus on grazing management for dairy cows. Shearer has been farming since 1963 and has come to rely on intensive grazing, seasonal dairying, diversification and debt elimination to keep the farm profitable. He has shared his experience by serving on producer panels and by presenting at meetings and workshops. He is committed to sharing his experience in maintaining a "viable, profitable and ecologically friendly dairy operation" by expanding his presence at conferences and other gatherings. Shearer can be reached at ll-shear@mtdata.com or by calling (413) 624-3978.

Northeast SARE is providing grants to support the work of these farmer educators. "Farmers value the ideas and experience of other farmers," says Program Manager David Holm, "and we see this as an important component of the achieving the SARE mission."

The SARE program supports research, education and producer projects that advance the goals of sustainable agriculture.

The Northeast SARE region is made up of Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C.

Drought Creates Conditions For Devastating Wildfires

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Widespread drought in Pennsylvania — combined with the annual shower of colored leaves and twigs — are making forests particularly flammable this fall.

The wildfires flaring up across the state — although unfortunate — serve to illustrate the important role "prescribed burning" can play in forest management, said a forest ecologist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"For thousands of years, fire played a normal — and beneficial — role in forests in the eastern United States," said Marc Abrams, professor of forest ecology and physiology. "Fires moved through the understory of oak and pine forests every five to 10 years, burning up excess fuel, eliminating weedy species, and helping to create the healthy forests we have had historically.

"But as a result of fire suppression practices started in the early 1900s, fuels have built up to unnaturally high levels," he said. "Today's fires are hotter and more destructive — and they're killing more trees. The lack of regular fire also is having a profound impact on forest composition. In particular, we have seen a dramatic increase in red maple, birch, and cherry."

Abrams supports the use of "prescribed burning," in which experienced foresters start, control, and end fires as a forest management tool. "Historically, American Indians used fire to encourage the growth of trees that produce food for wildlife," he said. "Fires also started naturally, from lightning strikes."

A 2,700-acre wildfire burned recently near Pine Creek in Lycoming County. Two others — one covering 300 acres and another consuming 350 acres — erupted in the Moshannon State Forest, as did one in the Michaux State Forest and one in a forested area north of Harrisburg.

The fires aren't limited to Pennsylvania. The drought has been blamed for the worst outbreak of forest fires in the Appalachians in a decade, including 150,000-acre burns in Kentucky and the Smoky Mountains.

Pennsylvania's Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Game Commission, and Fish and Boat Commission all banned open fire on their lands, and recommend extreme caution. The Game Commission also issued a smoking ban.

"Western forest fires get most of the press since they're more flammable and catastrophic," Abrams said. "Predominantly evergreen, western forests tend to burn as 'crown fires,' or 'stand-replacing fires.' To some extent, it's expected out there that fire will burn through the crown, kill the existing trees, and allow a new forest to develop.

"Our situation in the East is different. Most of our deciduous forests historically burned as low-intensity, understory fires. These fires kept the forest in an 'oak and pine successional phase' by eliminating competing species, reducing litter, and exposing the mineral soil. This stimulated acorns to germinate and grow in the understory."

Because fuel loading has grown quite high, Abrams explains that we may get mixed results in the beginning from prescribed burning. We may get the desired effects in some stands, but others may burn too hot — until an equilibrium gets established.

"In the East, we must learn to think about the beneficial effects of using fire in our ecosystem management practices," he said. "If we don't, we can anticipate a large decline in oak and pine populations from the present levels."

USDA To Measure Pennsylvania Cattle Inventory

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In January 2001, the total number of cattle and calves in Pennsylvania was estimated at 1,640,000 head. This was a decline of 10,000 head from January 2000.

There were 150,000 head of beef cows for 2001, again down from the previous year by 1,000 head, and 610,000 head of milk cows, down 9,000 head from January 2000. Pennsylvania's 2000 calf crop also moved down 10,000 head to 670,000 from its 1999 level.

USDA's January Cattle Report Survey is the only chance to officially measure the entire Cattle industry in Pennsylvania and the U.S. in 2002. Approximately 1,700 cattle producers will be contacted for the state of Pennsylvania and 50,000 operators for the U.S.

In mid to late December, Pennsylvania cattle operations will receive questionnaires in the mail and in late December and early January, respondents will be contacted by an enumerator either by telephone or personal interview.

As with all surveys conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), by federal law, your survey data is kept confidential. Names, addresses, and information about individual operations are considered private information and are exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act. Data on individual operations cannot be released to the public or to any other local, state, or national government agency under any circumstances.

National survey results will be released from Washington, D.C. at 3 p.m. on Feb. 1. All reports are available on the Internet within minutes of the scheduled release time at www.usda.gov/nass/.

Marc Smith Appointed Assistant Director At NYS Ag Experiment Station

GENEVA, N.Y. — Marc Smith has been appointed assistant director of the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in Geneva, N.Y., to serve as a member of the Station's administrative team, along with director James E. Hunter and associate director Robert Seem.

Smith's day-to-day activities will be to provide leadership for the field research unit, institute better policies for resource allocation, introduce 'best agricultural' practices in Station greenhouses, and chair the Station's safety committee. He will work on issues associated with Cornell's Agriculture & Food Tech Park, and farm use and acquisition. He will also work as the Station liaison with agricultural producers and organizations throughout the state. Smith replaces Roscoe 'Pat' Krauss, who retired as assistant to the director in 1995 but continued to serve on a casual appointment until December 2000.

Smith brings a varied agricultural background to his position. He grew up on a 2,500-acre, 900-cow dairy farm in York, graduated from Cornell in 1976 with a B.S. in ag economics, and served in the Peace Corps in Chile. He then spent two years in Australia, where he earned a master's degree in economics from the University of New England. In 1981, he returned to the farm in York, where he served as town supervisor in Livingston County and worked with Cornell's department of ag economics as a research support specialist.

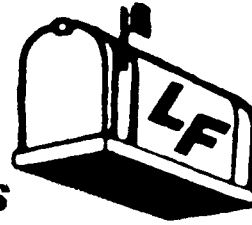

In 1985, he set up an agricultural advisory council for Louise Slaughter, congresswoman from Rochester. That led to his political appointment as state executive director for the USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA), from 1994 to 2001.

"That position helped me establish the connections I have with growers, producers, legislators and state agricultural groups like the Hort Society, the NY Apple Association, the NYS Vegetable Growers, and the Farm Bureau," said Smith.

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cow's well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE

The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE

SAFE

BEEF TIPS

Cold Winters Result in Higher Birth Weights

University of Nebraska researchers have concluded that calves have higher birth weights following a very cold winter. It is believed that cold temperatures cause the body to shunt blood supply into the internal organs and the developing fetus. Simmental breeders are advised to never use a large bull calf as a herd sire. Calving ease is a must for bull producers and the Simmental breed associations have emphasized this direction for the past 10 years.

Call for a FREE directory and map of ALL Simmental breeders in your area.
